ODT Control Over Tires Seen as Key To Gas Row

Congressman Asks That OPA Give Up Job Saving Rubber; 90-Day Delay Sought

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Congressional opposition to Nation-wide gasoline rationing would largely subside if the program for conserving automobile tires were shifted from the Office of Price Administration to the Office of Defense Transportation, a spokesman for a special House anti-gas-rationing committee declared last night.

As the fight against extension of gasoline rationing reached new peaks of intensity on both sides of the Capitol, Representative Anderson (Democrat) of New Mexico, who yesterday spoke for his committee in laying its recommendations on rationing before a House Interstate Commerce Subcommittee, stated:

"A large proportion of the members of the House and Senate would be very well satisfied to see a mileage program in the hands of the ODT."

Asks 90-Day Delay

The legislator's statement recalled a proposal made by the Baruch Rubber Committee that gasoline rationing be put under supervision of ODT and an earlier suggestion by Joseph B. Eastman, ODT chief, for control of automobile use and conservation of rubber through issuance of certificates of necessity rather than by the indirect method of rationing gasoline.

Anderson, chairman of a 15-man committee named by a bipartisan caucus last week of House members opposed to gasoline rationing, recommended to the Interstate Commerce Subcommittee that rationing be delayed for all States west of the present rationed area for a period of 90 days to allow time for additional study of problems involved and that one area of the country be given six months to demonstrate "what voluntary tire-saving will accomplish."

Bitter Opposition Seen

Speaking for the group, Anderson also proposed that studies of ODT and the Office of Petroleum Coordinator be utilized in an attempt to make certain that "our transportation system throughout the country does not suffer a sudden and drastic collapse through premature and forced gasoline ra-

McKee Infant Found Hidden With Half Sister

Los Angeles, Nov. 25 (AP).—An intensive five-day search for the 2-year-old son of Mark T. McKee, Milwaukee steamship executive, ended today with discovery of the child in a house in suburban Montrose.

With the boy, Terry, was his 20-year-old half sister, Cynnthia.

On an order from police officers, she gave Terry to Joseph Scott, attorney for McKee.

Terry disappeared from the Pasadena home of Mrs. Evelyn McKee, 34, a few hours after her 54-year-old husband—father of 11 other children—was granted a divorce and formal custody for nine months of the year.

Later Scott obtained a court order giving "protective custody" of Terry and Cynnthia to Mrs. Meredith Stelle, wife of a retired insurance broker of Monrovia, Calif.

After Scott represented that Max de la Fuente, former Peruvian consul in Los Angeles, was still paying attention to Mrs. McKee, a temporary order was issued restraining both him and Mrs. McKee from visiting the children.

Are the Dutch Accepting the "New Order?"

No, says Selden Menefee in his article in tomorrow's Post. The Dutch have found many ways to spurn the Nazis and anything they try to accomplish in the Netherlands. It is this complete refusal by the Dutch to accept the "New Order" and the ways in which it is effected that angers the Nazis more and more. Learn how the brave Dutch people show that they are conquered in name only . . . read Mr. Menefee's article in tomorrow's Post, page opposite the editorials.

War's Exigencies

Prayer, Toil To Mark D. C. Thanksgiving

Prayers for a return of the days of peace and quiet will go up from Washington today as this city observes its first wartime Thanksgiving in a quarter century.

Government employes, for the most part, will put in a full day at their desks, and District homes by the score will be thrown open to visiting servicemen for whom various recreational agencies have also arranged entertainment and feasting galore.

President Roosevelt will lead the Nation in prayer during a White House service to be conducted at 11 a. m. by Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church. To be broadcast, the service will open with the Chief Executive reading his Thanksgiving Day proclamation. Hymns will follow.

One of the most impressive and outstanding services will be the annual Pan-American mass at 10:30 a. m. at St. Patrick's Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. The service will be attended by high-ranking Latin-American diplomats, officials of the State Department

Education Held Way to Allay Traffic Peril

Bus, Trolley Drivers And Public Must Be Trained, Officials Feel

District government, transportation and police officials met yesterday to discuss mounting traffic deaths and concluded that the factor most needed is greater effort along educational lines for the public and for operators of public vehicles.

Further consideration by the Public Utilities Commission of locations of streetcar stop islands and their juxtaposition to cross walks was the only other definite step decided upon by the group.

Other measures, which probably will include instructions to police to prohibit bus and streetcar passengers from crowding in the front end of vehicles and obstructing the operators' views, will be ordered by the commissioners after a review of the testimony heard at the meeting.

Attending the fact-finding parley were members of the Public Utilities Commission, E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co.; Whitney Leary, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council; D. C. Traffic Inspector A. E. Miller, Maj. Edward J. Kelly, Superintendent of Police; Harvey G. Callahan, assistant superintendent of police; J. G. Bigelow, president of the Amalgamated Association of Electric Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America; William A. Van Duzer, traffic director; Howard Wentworth, traffic department public relations secretary; R. R. Duell, Capital Transit Co. motorman; Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, D. C. Coroner, and the D. C. Commissioners.

The assembled officials heard Coroner MacDonald say that an im-

Fix War Aims, Willkie Urges

Toronto, Nov. 25 (INS).—To win the peace as well as the war, the United Nations must agree now on the common purposes for which they are fighting, Wendell Willkie declared tonight.

"I live in constant dread," Willkie declared in a speech prepared for delivery at a Toronto aid-Russia rally, "that this war may end before the people of the world have come to a common understanding of what they fight for and what they hope for after the war is over."

U. S. and British Planes Batter Bizerte, Other Axis Hotbeds

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 25.—The grand Allied assault on Tunis and Bizerte is about to be launched by the force of British Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson, the Morocco radio announced tonight while American and British planes in relays pounded Axis hotbeds over the whole Tunisian battleground.

The radio declared that Anderson and the British First Army and a supporting force of Americans had once more thrown back a German column in an engagement 28 miles south of Tunis.

The regular communique of the Allied force headquarters in North Africa merely said that "the British First Army is making satisfactory progress in operations against the enemy in eastern forward areas."

The communique, devoted mainly to the terrific aerial battering that the combined R. A. F. and U. S. air forces are giving the Axis, said that two successful raids were carried out on Bizerte Monday and Tuesday nights and that U. S. Army P-38 fighters of the Fourteenth Air Force destroyed 14 enemy planes in Tunisia yesterday.

All Planes Back Safely

The fighter bag included, the war report said, seven Italian troop transport planes shot down at Gabes and two Junkers 88 planes destroyed elsewhere in southern Tunisia; four transport planes and one seaplane and a tank destroyed on the airfield at Gabes.

From these actions, the communiqque said, all planes returned safely. Four were damaged and one pilot was wounded.

In raids on the Bizerte naval base, the communique said, R. A. F. bombers Monday night caused a large explosion and more than 30 small ones on the Bizerte airfield.

The Tuesday night attack was devoted mainly to the Bizerte docks and shipping in the harbor.

"Numerous bomb flashes were seen and there was a big sheet of flame which appeared to come from exploding gasoline," the communique said.

Foe Bent on Winning Tunisia

The French were giving support to the British and Americans, the Morocco radio reported. It broadcast a French general headquarters communique saying "our troops are effectively accomplishing their task side by side with Allied troops."

The Axis poured aerial reinforcements into Sardinia and Sicily and flew troops to Tunisia today while Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in Commons twice emphasized that the battle of North Africa has reached an "extremely critical" phase.

The determined efforts to reinforce Tunisia made it plain that the Germans and Italians will try to win in Tunisia at any cost—even perhaps at the expense of the Russian front or the battered retreating forces in Libya, which apparently will be left to make whatever stand they can at El Agheila.

Bone Bombed Twice

Reports of fighting, now spread over about all of Tunisia in sharp and violent patrol clashes, were highlighted by air activity.

Axis powers appeared to be concentrated in the small pocket around Bizerte and Tunis on the north coast where the Allied forces were within 25 to 30 miles and moving in along the rugged coastal

Nazi Toll Rises; 30-Mile Gap Is Sole Retreat Avenue Open

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), Nov. 26.—The Red army striking across the snow-covered Don steppes west of Stalingrad has seized the Don-Chir River junction in a move threatening rapidly to complete the envelopment of the 300,000-man German assault army at Stalingrad.

A special Soviet communique, the fourth in four days, announced also that the Nazi toll in dead and captured now stood at 98,000 and presumably another 140,000 Germans have been wounded in the bloody battle of the Don River bend.

The Russian armies occupied Novomaximovsky and Staromaximovsky at the junction of the Don and Chir Rivers, 65 miles southwest of Stalingrad, the communique said.

Major Success Indicated

This indicated one of two developments. Either the Russian army which struck across the Don River at Serafimovich on the north side of the bend had penetrated clear across that strategic elbow to the southern side, or that the Red Army column driving down the Stalingrad-Novorossisk railroad had turned northward to link up with the upper Soviet army.

Field dispatches had reported, before issuance of the communique, that only a 30-mile gap remained to be closed inside the Don elbow to cut off the Nazi armies massed near Stalingrad. This gap apparently was between Chernyshevskaya and the Stalingrad-Rostov railway which skirts the Chir River just above its confluence with the Don.

6 More Villages Taken

Besides occupying the new and old cities of Maximovsky on the Chir-Don Rivers, the communique said, six more villages had been taken, the Twenty-second Tank Division had been routed, 15,000 prisoners taken, and 6000 Nazis killed during yesterday's operations.

This made a total of 47,000 German dead and 51,000 captives. In addition the Russians said they now have captured 1300 guns of all calibers, 5518 trucks, more than 500 tanks, 62 ammunition dumps and vast quantities of equipment and food.

(The Germans had little to say about the Stalingrad and Don River bend battles except the claim that the Russians were losing heavily. But the Germans referred to Soviet successes on the Rzhev front, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, which the Russians did not mention. The Russians were conceded by the Germans to have

Army Flier Freed In Plane Crash Which Killed 12

Santa Ana, Calif., Nov. 25 (INS).—An Army court-martial today acquitted Second Lieut. William N. Wilson, 25, of involuntary manslaughter charges filed after 12 persons were killed in a midair collision between Wilson's bomber and an American Airlines plane over Palm Springs.

The court of 10 of Wilson's superior officers deliberated 37 minutes.

A surprise witness at the three-day hearing, Pvt. Roy West, 20, of Dallas, Tex., said he saw the planes come together and that it appeared to him that the airliner ran into the bomber from underneath. West said he witnessed the crash from a tennis court in Palm Springs.

Wilson admitted at the trial that he had a tentative "date" to pass the airliner, on which his friend, Louis Reppert, was copilot.

Gen. Duncan Missing; Plane Dived Into Sea

U. S. Air Staff Chief For Europe Was on Flight to Africa

By the Associated Press

Brig. Gen. Asa N. Duncan, chief of air staff in the European theater, has been forced down at sea and is missing in action.

The War Department reported that General Duncan, 50, was lost while flying from England to North Africa on November 17. His plane went into the sea off the northern coast of France. No information, the Department said, has been received as to whether any of the personnel in the plane survived.

Duncan, a command pilot and combat observer, was made chief of air staff in the European theater last July. He is the second general of the Army Air Forces listed as missing in action. Maj. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker has been missing since he flew out to bomb the Japanese fleet approaching Midway Island last June.

Two other generals, Maj. Gen. Herbert A. Dargue and Brig. Gen. Harold H. George, have been killed in airplane accidents since the war started.

General Duncan's wife lives at Montgomery, Ala. He was born at Leighton, Ala., March 30, 1892. His first military service was as an enlisted man in the Alabama Military Guard on duty on the Mexican border in 1917. He was commissioned in the Alabama National Guard that year and served throughout the World War.

Deeds of Valor Told as Halsey Decorates Heroes of Pacific

Mortally Wounded, Men Remained At Battle Posts

By Eugene Burns
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in the South Pacific, Nov. 24 (Delayed).—On the punctured deck of a United States warship Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., presented decorations to 40 officers and men and told his command "we will show them that every one of you is a better man than that little yellow monkey."

Navy Crosses for gallantry in action were given to 17 officers and men. The Silver Star was awarded to 23 men, four of them posthumously.

Lieut. Comdr. Bruce McCandless, 31, Long Beach, Calif., who coolly directed his ship against enormous odds on the night of November 12 off Savo Island and brought her out, and Lieut. Comdr. Herbert Schonland, Portland, Me., were recommended for higher honors.

Halsey, with tears in his eyes during part of the ceremony, said, "To honor men of the South Pacific force and area who have written a glorious page in the history of our great Navy, we are assembled on this historic battle-scarred deck. I wish I could present every man with a medal as deserved—some day you'll get such a medal.

Nelson to Make Wilson Czar Of Production

Reported Determined To End Army Power Over Civil Output

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson, determined to keep control of our national economy in civilian hands, has prepared a directive delegating vast powers over production to WPB Vice-Chairman Charles E. Wilson and has determined to take away from the military its present power over production scheduling, it was learned yesterday.

Another Round in Struggle

Informed WPB sources interpreted Nelson's decision to go ahead with the directive as an indication that President Roosevelt placed no obstacles in his path yesterday when he visited the White House accompanied by Wilson.

The decision was another round in the current struggle between the military and WPB for supremacy over production. The struggle grew out of Nelson's decision to place control over aircraft production in Wilson's hands.

A letter conveying power over aircraft to Wilson and setting up an overall aircraft production board under Wilson was transmitted to Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of Navy Knox, but has remained unsigned.

The new directive which is reported ready for Nelson's signa-

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), Nov. 26.—Heavy and medium bombers operating under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command smashed a Japanese attempt to land reinforcements at Buna yesterday, sinking two enemy destroyers and damaging a third, apparently all heavily loaded with troops, Allied headquarters announced today.

A Japanese light cruiser and a fourth destroyer also in the action beat a hasty retreat from the northern New Guinea shore under the heavy Allied pounding, carried out in darkness by planes which first dropped flares and then blasted their lighted targets with 500-pound bombs.

This latest success was announced in a noon communique which disclosed that the fighting on land, continuing heavy, is slow and difficult in "low, tropical jungle, interspersed with swamp and tidal creek," and that the Allied troops "are now encountering carefully prepared positions strongly fortified with barbed wire, dugouts and all the defensive attributes of a fortress."

The destroyer damaged off Buna probably also was sunk, headquarters said.

'Right or Wrong, Make It Work'

Goebbels Feverishly Strives To Rally Wavering Nazi Morale

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 25.—A revealing article by German Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels broadcast by the Berlin radio tonight indicates that the German people are being swayed by Allied propaganda and are concerned about the German reverses.

Furthermore, throughout the article is the strong suggestion that the Nazi leaders are gravely worried about German morale.

In one of the most interesting essays Goebbels has yet written in the weekly publication Das Reich, the propaganda minister has told the Germans that they must try to surpass the enemy not only in gaining victories, "but also in the art of mastering reverses."

"Obstacles on the road to victory only heighten our spirit of attack and occasional reverses encourage us to fresh achievements," he said.

Goebbels has not seemed so concerned in any one matter since his speculative articles on the second front last summer when he boasted to the world that Germany was ready everywhere—no matter where the Allies might strike.

At the outset of his discourse, he said.

"It is he who approaches his objective never looking to the left or right and justifying his actions by their success rather than by morals who has the advantage in war."

Obviously concerned about the effect the Allied cause and perhaps Allied war aims are having on the German people, Goebbels propounded in the frankest terms a modern-day "Might Makes Right" theory:

"It is not so much a matter of what is moral and decent but of what promises success.

"If the German people immediately yield when their magnanimity and objectivity are appealed to, then this is due to the fact that they lack experience in political affairs and see their opponent as they are themselves, or what is still worse, as they would like to be themselves.

"It will yet take a long time until the idea has taken root in the German people, which is a matter of course with the British, that it is not a matter of right or wrong, but of the fatherland."

U. S. Shortens Shirttails, Bans Whipping Cream for Victory

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Fat men whose shirts creep up are going to have two or three inches less shirttail to meet the situation with, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

Reduction seems indicated, and the WPB helped with another order, cutting off the supply of whipping cream.

Shirts, in fact, are going to be plain and sturdy garments for the duration. Chic is out. No more front pleats. No bi-swings. No box pleated backs.

And pajamas . . .

All styles must be collarless. No cuffs on pants or sleeves. No sashes. No frogs, piping or other pretties.

This will save enough cloth, says the WPB, to make 10 million more shirts and 2,200,000 more pairs of pajamas. So it's well worth while.

About the cream.

Heavy cream, useful for whipping, is extensively used on sundaes, pies, cake and other desserts, and for eggnog and the like. The annual consumption is about 200 million pounds, about a pound and a half a person.

By cutting off the supply, the WPB saved the billion quarts of milk needed to produce this cream, so the milk will be available for use as milk, dried milk export and for cheese and other foodstuffs.

The benefit to the girls hit by the girdle rules and the stout men with the shorter shirttails will be incidental, although real.

Roosevelt Believed Considering Three-Way Cabinet Shakeup

A persistent report that President Roosevelt is planning a major Cabinet shakeup in connection with his current reorganization of the manpower set-up drew attention of Washington political circles yesterday, although confirmation from the principals was lacking.

According to the report, the following changes would be made:

The country's manpower set-up would be placed under the Department of Labor, with Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes becoming Secretary of Labor.

Ickes' Interior post would go to Paul V. McNutt, who now heads both the War Manpower Commission and the Federal Security Agency.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins would be shifted to the Federal Security Agency.

Some credence was lent to the report that the President was considering the manpower problem by the fact that President Murray of the C. I. O. and President William Green of the A. F. of L. conferred at the White House with President Roosevelt in the afternoon.

At the offices of both Ickes and McNutt, officials stated that their superiors knew nothing of the report. Miss Perkins could not be reached.

Transfer of the War Manpower Commission to the Department of Labor—major organizational shift involved in the purported shakeup—would be expected to please the leaders of organized labor who asked that the move be made when

War Sidelights

British Deny Women Full War Benefits

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—Commons today rejected a proposal to give women equal compensation with men for civilian war injuries. The vote climaxed one of the most heated debates in Parliament. Women are now given lower compensations than men by virtue of the differential in wages.

Doriot Said to Be Dead

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Evening Standard said today that according to reports reaching Britain Jacques Doriot, outstanding French advocate of collaboration with Germany, died of injuries received last week. There was no confirmation from other quarters.

Other reports reached London last Saturday that Doroit had been taken to a hospital after being badly beaten by a crowd.

No Time Lost

Recife, Brazil, Nov. 24 (AP).—The blackout which has been in force on this easternmost bulge of South America was suspended today by military authorities, a sequel to the announcement that Dakar, some 1800 miles across the South Atlantic, had thrown in its lot with the Allies.

More Arrests in Norway

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—The World Jewish Congress reported today that 2300 Jews in Norway had been arrested in a house-to-house manhunt by the Germans and sent to concentration camps preparatory to being put to work in northern Norway or Poland.

Toronto Reporter Admits Story on Nazi Prison Camp

Barrie, Ontario, Nov. 25 (AP).—Edward G. Rohrbough, American-born Toronto newspaperman, pleaded guilty today to a charge which involved the transmission to Time magazine of a story on a disturbance at the Bowmanville Camp for German prisoners of war.

The charge said Rohrbough transmitted information prejudicial to the safety of the state. He was given a two-year suspended sentence by Magistrate Compton Jeffs, who said, "the court has no desire to deal harshly with you."

Defense Counsel J. R. Cartwright said Rohrbough wrote one story on the Bowmanville disturbance for his Toronto newspaper (Star) and sent a similar story to Time magazine, assuming that it would be subject to censorship.

J. G. M. C. McRuer, crown counsel, said the article submitted to Time was not published as written, and that its most important details had since been repudiated by J. L. Ralston, Minister for National Defense.

4 Indicted in Plot To Mulct Workers On Navy Project

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 25 (AP).—Four men were indicted today on charges of inducing nonunion employes on a Government project to give $2.50 a week under a "permit card" system requiring them to pay for the privilege of working.

Indicted were Thomas F. McGraw, former business agent of Local 106, International Union of Operating Engineers (A. F. L.); George J. Mannl, former assistant busines. manager; James McDonald and Augustus M. Shock, stewards of the local.

The indictment said the alleged offenses occurred at the $13,200,000 Naval Supply Depot at Scotia, N. Y., and that the defendants obtained money from workers "by intimidation, threat of procuring dismissal and by other means."

Heavily-Escorted U. S. Bomber Group Raids Enemy Posts

By J. Reilly O'Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Air Forces in China, Nov. 23 (Delayed). American bombers, accompanied by the largest fighter escorts yet seen in the China theater, subjected two of Japan's main air bases in South China to punishing attacks today without drawing opposition from a single enemy plane.

An airport on the island of Sanchu, 72 miles south of Canton, was raided in the morning, and installations on the Tienha Airfield at Canton were destroyed in the afternoon.

Three hangars believed filled with Japanese planes, a big barracks and a large workshop area at the Sanchu Airport received direct hits in the morning raid. Five tons of bombs were dropped on the field, Japan's principal South China reserve base and airplane repair and storage center. Fires were started and oil supplies were belived set abalze.

A string of bombs exploded on a runway as three enemy planes were taking off. One was demolished before getting off the ground. Fighters attacked the others, probably damaging one.

The raid on the island base was led by Lieut. Col. Herbert Morgan of Freedom, Pa.

Col. Robert Scott of Macon, Ga., who led the fighter escort on the afternoon mission, said "their fighters wouldn't come up to meet us. Bombs covered the entire target area. Fire blazed up from hits on oil storage and within three minutes smoke plumed up 6000 feet."

McClain, Elephant Trainer, Is Killed

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 25 (AP).—Walter McClain, 44, superintendent and trainer of elephants for the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circus, was accidentally killed today while helping unload equipment of the big top for a one-day stand here.

Witnesses said McClain was applying the brakes on a heavy circus wagon loaded with equipment as it was being brought down a runway from a railway flat car and slipped off the side. A wheel of the wagon rolled over him.

Tanker Helps Little Escort Sink Raiding Jap Goliath

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 25.—The Admiralty disclosed today that a heavily armed Japanese raider was engaged and destroyed in the Indian Ocean November 11 by a minesweeper of the Royal Indian Navy and a Netherlands motor tanker.

The minesweeper, H. M. S. Bengal, was escorting the 6863-ton tanker Ondina about 1000 miles southwest of Java when they encountered the 10,000-ton Kikoku Maru and the 6863-ton Kunikawa Maru, both believed armed with six 5.5-inch guns and equipped with torpedo tubes and catapult aircraft.

The Bengal and the Ondina each had only a single 4-inch gun.

The Admiralty said the Bengal, commanded by Lieut. Comdr. W. J. Wilson, steamed immediately to the attack, heading for the larger of the two raiders and hoping that the Ondina would have time to escape.

But the master of the tanker refused to leave the Bengal to face two powerful adversaries alone, and both ships returned the Japanese fire.

A square hit on the leading raider started a fierce fire. Other hits were scored on the bridge, superstructure and stern, followed by an explosion which destroyed the after-part of the raider. She sank within a few minutes, her aircraft with her.

The Admiralty was unable to say which of the two raiders this was.

Roosevelt's Word

U. S. to Free Arab World, Iraq Assured

President Roosevelt assured the Prime Minister of Iraq yesterday that the United Nations would not rest "until the Arab world has been relieved of every vestige of the threat of Axis aggression which has so long hung over it."

"In this great undertaking," the President said in a message to the Prime Minister, "which we shall prosecute with ever increasing power, we are proud to feel that we have the sympathy and cooperation of Iraq and of all the Arab peoples."

Earlier, the White House had made public a message from the Sultan of Morocco, Sidi Mohammed, declaring all inhabitants of French Morocco had received the American forces "as friends."

He said the French colony "has no disagreement with the great Nation of the United States, whose chivalrous and liberal principles are known to us."

"It was, therefore," the Sultan said, "in the above spirit that we declared to Major General Patton that as long as our prestige, our soil, our religion and our traditions were respected by your troops they could rest assured that they found in Morocco only friends and collaborators."

The Sultan said Morocco had made an agreement with France following the armistice of June, 1940 to "defend our empire against any and all aggressors in order to prevent its occupation."

"When the American troops arrived in Morocco,' he added, "honor forced upon us the duty of defending ourselves in order that we might live up to our agreements.

"However, when the cessation of hostilities had been ordered and the commanders of your troops affirmed that they did not come as conquerors but as liberators, when they had given us tangible proof of their friendly methods, we had faith in their agreements."

The Sultan went on to say that first contacts between peoples who did not know each other well enough were "marked by hesitation and reticence, but progressively they are followed by esteem and friendship.'

Slay 70 Japanese On Guadalcanal; Enemy Base Bombed

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Pushing through the mountains and jungles southwest of Henderson Airfield, an American Marine patrol has struck a blow at enemy forces threatening the flank of our western advance on Guadalcanal, the Navy reported yesterday.

Seventy Japs were killed and five machine guns were captured when the Devildogs fell upon an enemy encampment on the northern slope of Mambulo, about three miles up the Matanikau River from the north shore of the island, a communique said.

American casualties in the fight were two Marines wounded.

At the same ime, the Navy announced that United States planes from Guadalcanal attacked an enemy base at Munda, which is on the western end of New Georgia Island, in the middle Solomons about 180 miles from Henderson Field.

Dive-bombers and fighter planes pounded Jap shore installations, scoring a direct hit on a warehouse, the communique said.

May Be Flanking Move

There had been no previous mention of the enemy being at Munda, but it was known that they had moved into various points in the middle Solomons. Most of the installations are small and designed to aid the Jap infiltration down through the islands toward Guadalcanal.

The air raid and the attack on the Japanese camp at Mambulo occurred November 23 (Solomons date). On Tuesday the Navy reported that on the same day Jap troops "were active in the Mambulo and upper Mantanikau River regions."

Whether this was a flanking movement against our troops advancing to the west of the American base or an effort to install artillery on high ground overlooking Henderson Field was not indicated.

Nor was it clear whether the daring raid of the skilled Marine jungle fighters eliminated the threat to our flank, if that was what it was. The terrain around Mambulo, which is both a village and a small mountain, is heavily jungled.

Text of the communique, No. 201, follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are East Longitude).

"1. On November 23:

"(a) A United States Marine patrol on Guadalcanal killed 70 Japanese and captured five machine guns in an enemy encampment on the north slope of Mambulo. Marine casualties were two wounded.

"(b) Dive-bombers and fighters from Guadalcanal attacked enemy installations at Munda on the western end of New Georgia Island. A direct hit was scored on a warehouse."

U. S. Cargo Ship Sunk in Atlantic; 32 Crewmen Lost

The Navy reported yesterday that a medium-sized United States merchant vessel was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in mid-Atlantic about the middle of October. Survivors have landed at an East Coast United States port.

Thirty-two crewmen were lost, but 27 others were rescued quickly by an Allied ship. Twenty-one of the saved were brought to an East Coast port, while six others remained in an Allied port.

Early yesterday the Navy announced that a medium-sized British merchant vessel was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Atlantic, off the northern coast of South America, late in September.

Thirty-eight of the 54-man crew were picked up by a Norwegian vessel. The remaining 16 crew members were missing.

The sinking brought to 538 the Associated Press tabulation of announced Allied and neutral ship losses in western Atlantic waters since Pearl Harbor.

C.I.O. to Put Steel Fight Over Wage Up to WLB

Pittsburgh, Nov. 25 (AP).—Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O. United Steel Workers, disclosed today he had notified the United States Steel Corp. the union would submit to the War Labor Board the issue of wage differentials between the company's northern and southern plants.

The union reported the basic wage rates, including a recent 5½ cents-an-hour increase ordered by the WLB, are 78 cents an hour in United States Steel's northern mills and 60½ cents an hour at Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co., United States Steel subsidiary in Birmingham, Ala.

War Production Board Lays Plans for Long-Drawn-Out War; Controls to Continue for Year or Two After Conflict Ends

War Production Board officials, sensing a tendency to relax restrictions and effort as a result of optimistic war news, told The Post yesterday that plans are still being drawn on the assumption that this country is fighting a long war, and that in any event, wartime controls would have to remain in effect for at least a year or two after an armsitice.

Demobilization of our vast munitions program and conversion to peacetime industrial activities must be an orderly and gradual process if our economy is to avoid complete disruption, it was said.

At the same time, the recent appointment of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York as director of foreign relief and rehabilitation makes it clear that wartime shortages of many materials will not disappear overnight, and that the demands which Lehman will place on our production resources to clothe and feed a good part of the world will call for a retention of many wartime restrictions including some rationing, it was said.

Food as War Weapon

Shipping space, the lack of which is responsible for some rationing, will continue to be short for sometime after the war to get the fundamental necessities of life to many countries abroad.

Meanwhile, Lehman told reporters after a conference with President Roosevelt that he considered his job as an important and constructive step in restoring economic stability to war-torn areas of the world, and that this would be of great permanent value to the United States.

Lehman added that his work would be of definite assistance in winning the war, indicating that the United States intends to make food a "weapon" in the drive to defeat the Axis.

The New York Governor stated that he will resign his post as chief executive of the Empire State next Thursday and that he has no intention of returning to politics after the war.

"I'm going to carry out the President's program to feed the peoples of reoccupied countries, and later to rehabilitate the populations of those countries."

Before going to the White House, Lehman conferred with Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Bloom (Democrat) of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Tighter Curbs Sought

Instead of letting down the bars on wartime restrictions, military successes should force tighter restrictions, one official stated. As supply lines lengthen out, a growing need to feed and clothe occupied areas develops, it was pointed out.

Meanwhile, it is understood that WPB intends to continue planning for war—its main job. Post-war planning, an activity carried on extensively in some other Government agencies, has made little headway in WPB.

One official explained, "We don't know if we will have the job of converting our economy to peace."

Demobilization of the country's munitions program is expected to be carried on by the Army-Navy Munitions Board, units of which have been integrated with the War Production Board. Significantly, however, the units have been allowed to remain intact to enable the ANMB to reform at the end of the war and resume its normal peacetime job of planning mobilization for war.

Heurich Donates Gym for Use Of Marine Guard

Christian Heurich, the centenarian Washington brewer, has donated a fully-equipped gymnasium to the Marine Guard Battalion, Lieut. Col. Charles Dunbeck, commanding officer of the battalion, announced yesterday.

The gymnasium, located at Twenty-sixth and Water Streets Northwest, will be used by the Marines in regular athletics whenever weather prevents outside sports.

To Name States Beauty

A "Miss All States" will be chosen tomorrow night at ceremonies in the Washington Hotel, with the winner to be presented a loving cup from Irene Waznick, last year's queen. Howard Chandler, model agency head, is among those expected to attend the affair. Judges are Ray Carson of WWDC, Senator George E. Radcliff and the night-club writers of the local newspapers.

Strike Threatened By Utility Workers

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 25 (AP).—The Utilities Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) called a conference of 2500 employes of the Consumers Power Co. to "fix a date for a strike" to enforce demands for wage increases and a union shop.

The threatened strike, if carried out on a general scale, would paralyze war production in a large section of Southern Michigan, outside of the Detroit area itself. Consumers Power serves the populous Saginaw Valley, a busy industrial area that is the home of the Chevrolet division of General Motors.

"The old grey mare she ain't what she used to be"—might as well admit it, Henry. Remember a few nights ago, how that chill wind played chop-sticks up and down your spine? Senate Hears Ecuador Head Pledge Unity

By the Associated Press

President Carlos Arroyo Del Rio of Ecuador assured the Senate yesterday that in Ecuador there is and will be "forthright effort to cooperate with the United States in the struggle for victory for democracy."

Here as a guest of President Roosevelt, Arroyo drew applause from the Senators when he declared that it was a great privilege to address them because "it was highly necessary that the voices of all the people in the hemisphere be heard as one."

"You in the United States have a great symbol," he said, "that symbol is George Washington.

Prays for Fraternity

"Washington was a man who paid homage to truth. He was a citizen who in his life set himself as an example of rectitude.

"This is an hour in which America needs that the truth be spoken.

"An hour in which it is absolutely necessary America act in a forthright manner.

"We in Latin America also have our representative men. What we need now is that these men not continue to represent a single country but an entire continent.

"I pray therefore that when the hour of peace comes it will be an hour of Inter-American fraternity. Washington will be our man and Bolivar will belong to you.

"The men who today direct the United States on her march will belong to all."

Visits Mount Vernon

Earlier, he had visited George Washington's Mount Vernon home and had laid a large wreath carrying a small silk Ecuadorean flag on the tomb of the First President. He then visited the Municipal Airport, and Arlington Cemetery where, before a guard of honor, he placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A visit to the home of Gen. Robert E. Lee followed.

The President later attended a lunch in his honor given by Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and met official Washington at a reception at the Pan American Union given in his honor by Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ecuadorean Ambassador.

Hagerstown Surveyed On Rental Vacancies

Mischa Auer Dislikes Gas Mixed With Sugar

Hollywood, Calif. (AP).—The Explosive Squad of the police department was unable to give Mischa Auer, movie comedian, any idea of what might happen to him if he attempted to drive his car after someone had poured a quantity of sugar into its gasoline tank. Rather than make any scientific contribution to posterity on the subject, by actually trying to drive the car, Auer called a garage man, and paid $14.40 to have the tank drained and cleaned.

4 Nazi Prisoners Retaken After Fleeing Train

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 25 (AP).—Four German soldiers, captured by Australian forces in Africa, escaped near here early today from a prison train carrying them to an interment camp in the United States, but all were recaptured within seven hours.

The escape was discovered by an alert brakeman who saw a man lying beside the tracks as the train pulled through Altamont Pass, near Livermore, about 30 miles east of Oakland. He signaled an emergency stop.

The man was retaken and a second prisoner was seen climbing an embankment by an armed guard. The guard fired a single shot and the prisoner surrendered. Two civilian defense auxiliary policemen found the third asleep in an automobile near Pleasanton where the driver had left it while seeking help to fix a flat tire. It was said he crawled in the automobile to get warm.

The fourth contributed to his own capture by thumbing a ride with an American workman. The motorist soon discovered his companion couldn't speak English and turned him over to the gate guard at the military project where he worked.

Did you know that a good radio should NOT have tone?

A radio should have no tone of its own—if you are to hear the program as it is played. It is this "noiseless" quality that set a Stromberg-Carlson above all other radios.

IT ADDS NOTHING. The exclusive "full-floating" tone-true Speaker prevents distortion at any usable volume. And Frequency Modulation reception, under the Armstrong system, virtually eliminates static and interference.

IT TAKES NOTHING AWAY. Having the widest range of natural tone, a Stromberg-Carlson brings you deep bass, high treble notes and overtones lost by ordinary radios.

For a radio that does not impose unwanted sounds on great music . . . hear Model 925-PF* (below), a radio-phonograph combination. You'll agree, "There is nothing finer than a Stromberg-Carlson."

MODEL 925-PF*, a combination FM-AM radio-phonograph for $300. Also a range of other models in authentic period designs. Easy payment terms are available.

"I'm helping break a BOTTLENECK

by making my wartime trips in MID-WEEK"

A little change in your travel habits makes a big difference in wartime transportation. By taking your trips on mid-week days — Tuesdays, Wednesdays, or Thursdays—you avoid week-end crowds. And you save a seat for a fighting man or a war worker — week-ends are often the only time he can travel at all. You'll find it wise, also, to skip holiday trips.

Under present conditions you may be inconvenienced on occasion but you can make things easier and simpler if you'll get tickets and information in advance —be prompt at terminals and rest stops to save precious minutes now that wartime speed is reduced — and take along less baggage than usual. If everybody helps there'll be no "bottlenecking!"

John H. Wilkins Answers Your Questions On Coffee Rationing

Every effort is being made by our government to see that this great nation of Coffee-drinkers continues to enjoy its favorite beverage. Here are highlights of a reasonable Rationing System, designed to place every Coffee purchaser on the same basis. Please read it carefully.

Question: Why Is Coffee Rationed?

Answer: The answer, of course, is "the war, and our critical need for ships." A case in point is the great number of ships recently needed for successfully landing troops and supplies in North Africa. Consider, also, the supply ships needed by our Navy in the Pacific. Let's all remember that the purpose of Coffee Rationing, is to guarantee to each person the privilege of buying as much as her neighbor. Let's also hope that as Rationing helps solve the problem of supply and demand, you may be allowed to have more Coffee.

Question: Why Have Coffee Sales Been Frozen?

Answer: This week while you can't buy Coffee—your grocer is stocking his shelves so that everyone entitled to present a Ration Stamp next week, and thereafter for the purchase of a pound of Coffee, can be supplied.

Question: Who Can Buy Coffee?

Answer: Every person 15 years of age, or over, at the time of registration, who holds a War Ration Stamp Book No. 1—the same book that is now used for Sugar.

Question: Suppose I Don't Own a "Sugar Stamp Book?"

Answer: You can register for one now, with your local War Price and Rationing Board.

Question: How Much Coffee Does Rationing Allow Me?

Answer: Stamp Number 27, in your "Sugar Book" is good for one pound of WILKINS, or other Coffee, any time after midnight, Saturday, November 28th. Five weeks thereafter, the next authorized stamp will be good for another pound. Public announcements will be made if this rationing plan is changed by your government.

Question: How Many Pounds of Coffee Can I Buy?

Answer: Just as many as your family has authorized stamps during each five-week period.

Question: Must I Always Have My Ration Book When Buying Coffee?

Answer: Emphatically "YES." Your grocer must always detach proper stamp from your War Ration Book Number 1. He must also see your book because of the age limit. If you order WILKINS, or other Coffee, by telephone, Ration Stamp Number 27, must invariably be surrendered on delivery of Coffee during the first five-week period, running from November 29th, through January 3rd.

Question: Do I Need My Stamp Book When Dining in a Restaurant?

Answer: "NO"—Rationing Boards are authorized to issue special certificates enabling hotels and restaurants to purchase Coffee on a ration basis, for serving as a beverage to the public.

And Now A Final Word . . .

Don't blame your government . . don't blame your grocer. Let's all be good Americans—good sports —and regard Rationing as our personal contribution towards winning the war.

Postoffice Issues Plea For More Men

Intelligent, able-bodied men between the ages of 25 and 50 are sorely needed by the District Postoffice, which reported yesterday that the public generally had failed to heed the "mail early" plea directed to Christmas patrons.

"We do not need any more students for the holiday mailing rush," Postmaster Vincent Burke emphasized yesterday. "We've got all the applications we can handle from college boys and high school seniors—the group from which we always take our Christmas help—but we do need men.

"The jobs pay 65 cents an hour for day work and 71 cents for night work, between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m., and the appointments, in all probability, will be permanent."

Burke set no figure as to the number of men he needs, but declared "we've been able to place virtually every man who meets the requirements and who has applied to us for work."

He stipulated that applicants cannot be employed by any other Government agency. Their applications should be directed to Larson Swain in the main office next to Union Station.

As for the plea that Christmas parcels be mailed before December 1, the postmaster indicated the public had not taken seriously the warning that unless this deadline is heeded thousands of donors and recipients are going to be disappointed.

"We're noticing a slight increase in mailing, but not as much as we had hoped for," he said. "The railroads already are carrying capacity loads. We've lost about 500 men to the armed services. It all adds up to a tremendous burden as we anticipate the Christmas rush. Patrons either will mail by December 1 or shortly thereafter, or take upon their own heads the responsibility for delayed deliveries."

Dec. 15 Last Day To Apply for No. 1 Ration Book

Persons who do not possess War Ration Book No. 1 must file applications for the coupon book with local ration boards by December 15, the Office of Price Administration said today.

The book is necessary for the purchase of both coffee and sugar and will have to be presented to local boards around the first of the year in order to receive War Ration Book No. 2, the "universal" ration book.

To prevent fraud, OPA instructed local boards to "examine closely" persons who claim never to have applied for the book, so that no one shall obtain more than one copy of the ration book.

In connection with the gasoline rationing program, OPA urged motorists to indorse their coupons at once with the tag number and State of issue rather than waiting to indorse each coupon when making a gasoline purchase at a service station. This will help protect the ration books from misuse in the case of loss or theft, OPA said.

Victor Broenstrupp, alleged pro-Nazi plotter, was postponed today until the necessary papers arrive from Washington, where he is accused of seditious conspiracy. 2 Deny Guilt in Army School Contract Deal As U. S. Moves to Stamp Out War Brokers

Two officials of the National Schools of Los Angeles, which are training men for Army technical positions, pleaded innocent in District Court yesterday to an indictment charging them with conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with War Department contracts.

They were Joseph A. Rosenkranz, president of the schools, and Louis J. Rosenkranz, secretary treasurer. The indictment, returned October 28, also named as defendant Francis J. Buckley, Washington real estate agent, who pleaded innocent November 6. All are free under $2500 bond each.

The trio is accused specifically of plotting to obtain contracts for the training of Army personnel through Buckley, who allegedly received more than $3000 in commissions—in violation of an executive order outlawing employment of a broker in negotiations with the Government. The five contracts named in the indictment expressly guaranteed, it was charged, that they had not been negotiated through a paid agent.

Tom C. Clark, chief of the War Frauds Unit of the Justice Department, obtained the indictment after several months of investigation. He was aided by Arthur B. Caldwell and George M. Fay, special assistants to the Attorney General.

The prosecutors described the indictment as the beginning of a series directed against "war brokers" who have profited by "several millions dollars" on contracts with the Government.

Finland to Resume World War I Debt Payments to U. S.

Helsinki (From Finnish Broadcasts), Nov. 25 (AP).—The official Helsinki radio said it was announced today that Finland would continue to pay her war debt to the United States as installments fall due "just as long as Finland can obtain United States dollars for the purpose."

Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister to Washington, it said, has been instructed to pay the next installment, due in December, from Finnish assets frozen in the United States.

Finland's last payment on the First World War debt was $159,398, made June 15, 1940, and the next payment will be due in May, 1943.

Congressional acts granted Finland options to postpone its debt payments for 1941 and 1942, and the nation accepted them.

Thanksgiving
ANNO DOMINI •• MCMXLII
It is a day when heads will bow in reverence to a kind Providence. And though the world is at war and the powers of evil seemingly hold nations in their grasp, we in America are thankful for the opportunity given us to serve in the cause of freedom.
We are thankful that our fighting forces are waging battle relentlessly; that our army and navy are engaged in a just cause; that our marines are striking telling blows; that our planes soar through treacherous alien skies to seek the enemy.
We are thankful, too, that we at home are permitted to help fight the good fight; that we have the privilege of supplying our armed forces with the sinews of war and that we may continue to do so until victory is won.
And we are thankful that America's railroads cheerfully accept their responsibility; that here at "North Western" some 32,000 employees are keenly aware of the importance of their work in the war for freedom . . . a war that shall end only when the forces of evil are consumed in the fires of their own greed and lust.

WAR BONDS AND STAMPS
Today we honor the heroes, living and dead, of two World Wars. To the one an Armistice brought peace in 1918. For the other, peace must still be won in the future, by long and hard fighting. In the name of that first Armistice—we look forward to the termination of World War II with the United Nations victorious, and justice meted out for all the people of the world who have fought so zealously for the end of fascism and the rebirth of world freedom!

United Nations Must Define Purposes, Drive Toward Them on Global Scale, Says Willkie

Toronto, Nov. 26.—Wendell L. Willkie told Canadians tonight that the peoples of the United Nations must define their purposes during the war and reach "a common understanding of what they fight for and what they hope for" or risk having "sacrificed and suffered to win a war for no purpose."

This war, Willkie declared in an address prepared for delivery at a rally here of the Canadian Aid-to-Russia fund, "is either a 'grand coalition' of peoples, fighting a common war for liberation, or it is nothing . . .

"It must be either a great pooling of all our energies, inspired by a united strategy, planned and fought on a global scale, or it will be lost . . .

"We must declare the common purpose which drives us all, or we run the risk of having worked and sacrificed and suffered to win a war for no purpose."

He was given a rousing ovation by the 17,500 present, the cheers lasting several minutes after he reached the platform and recurring at times during his address.

Willkie said he found everywhere on his flight around the world encouragement on the fighting fronts and a resolution to win the peoples behind the fronts. He added:

"But I also found—and this troubled me greatly—I also found worry and doubt in the hearts and minds of the people. . . . They were searching for a common cause. . . .

World War I ended "with an armistice, not a real peace," he went on, because Lenin gave the world one set of answers, Wilson gave it another and "neither set of answers ever became blood-and-bone part of the war. . . . Neither set of answers redeemed the war or made it anything more than a costly fight for power."

"I do not believe this war need be the same," he said. "There are now, during the war, common purposes in the minds of men living as far apart as the citizens of Great Britain and the free commonwealth of nations, the Americans, the Russians and the Chinese."

Willkie took as his keynote—"A War of Liberation"—a phrase from the statement of war purposes made by Josef Stalin on November 6. Stalin's "program of action" included "abolition of racial exclusiveness, equality of nations and integrity of their territories, liberation of enslaved nations and restoration of their sovereign rights, the right of every nation to arrange its affairs as it wishes, economic aid to nations that have suffered . . . restoration of democratic liberties, the destruction of the Hitlerite regime."

Willkie said he found but one fault—that Stalin limited his program to the Allied coalition and declared that "it should be applied to the world."

"We must guard against the recurrence of dollar and pragmatic diplomacy," he said.

Germans See Tide Turning, Wallace Says

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—The German people are realizing that the tide is turning, Vice President Henry A. Wallace said in a message released today in which he also promised that the United Nations will carry the fight to the enemy.

Vice President Wallace addressed the message to the nineteenth annual convention of Junior Hadassah, Young Women's Zionist Organization of America.

For Just Cause

There is one group of persons in this country who have considerably more than academic interest in the warrant issued for the deportation of Jan Valtin, secret agent extraordinary and author of the best-seller, "Out of the Night." That group is composed of enemy aliens who are now in American internment camps. We have no way of knowing what they think of Mr. Valtin. But there is certainly reason to believe that they will not be unduly indignant about his arrest. Because the plain truth is that many of them have been interned for records and sympathies that do not even begin to match the very bad record and recently uncertain sympathy of Mr. Valtin. He was, as is well known, first a Communist, then a Nazi agent. By his own admission he reentered this country illegally after having been arrested and deported and after having committed a crime involving moral turpitude.

Recently, apparently, Mr. Valtin has led a model life. He has been of use to Government agencies, and has even acquired a reputation as a successful war-bond salesman. Nevertheless, for all the evidence of his "present reliability and good character," the Board of Immigration Appeals has, with unassailable logic to our way of thinking, concluded that there is not sufficient proof "to show that he has completely divested himself of his past of destruction, lawlessness and wavering loyalties." Presumably Mr. Valtin, like other internees who have volunteered to help our war effort, will be held until the end of the war, and will then be deported. His lot is unenviable. But so is the lot of many others who have wisely been taken into custody.

Peace Offensive

If we know very little about the Japanese, they are equally in the dark about us. That is doubtless the reason that the former Ambassador to Washington, Admiral Nomura, is warning the Japanese against underrating their enemy. The warning was probably necessary. Japanese have long been taught that the American people are too soft to fight, let alone to fight to victory. That we are too soft to fight is a theory which already must have been thrown into the discard. Our soldiers have put up too many Stalingrads in the Pacific to be dismissed as amateur warriors. But the feeling that we lack the determination to pursue the conflict to the bitter end remains confirmed in the Japanese makeup.

One of these days the Japanese may put our determination to the test. Japan is not so fanatical as to prefer to gain her ends by fighting. If there is a less arduous path to conquest than a continuance of sanguinary conflict, she will undoubtedly take it. In all likelihood her leaders are thinking right now of ways and means of creating such a path. For the news from Russia and Africa brings them face to face with the prospect that the time may not be long distant when they will be left alone to contest the might of the United Nations. This they will try to avoid. They might try to do so by launching a peace offensive of their own when Germany seems on the verge of being put out of the struggle.

In this as in many other so-called innovations in warmaking the Japanese are pioneers. In the last war Japan was so disloyal to the Allied cause that several times, when German chances seemed bright, she started informal discussions with the Germans. In other words, she waged war and peace simultaneously. In this war a similar maneuver would therefore be familiar practice. Those who have recently come back from the Far East reinforce the expectation of overtures by telling of the eagerness with which the Japanese discussed the midterm elections. Even the lowly jailers tried to get opinions on those elections from their American prisoners. J. B. Powell, the Shanghai editor, who suffered so grievously from his incarceration, says that the Japanese thought that a new President was to be elected. The implication of their interest and concern was that there might be a chance of making a deal with a new President.

How could the Japanese frame a peace offensive? Many methods have been suggested. The Japanese might offer to get out of the Philippines. They might even order the suicide of the men responsible for Pearl Harbor by way of feigning expiation. This latter method of bringing us to terms might sound outlandish, but in Japan we are dealing with a nation whose ways are dark, and no such extravagance is impossible. It is difficult to conceive that any peace maneuver, no matter how seemingly sincere, would deceive more than a fragment of our population. But we must be prepared for it. Nothing but the complete crushing of Japanese militarism can precede peace in the Pacific.

Thanksgiving

War had not arrived when the American people celebrated their last Thanksgiving. Accordingly the festival was both traditional and American. In customary style we returned thanks for the horn of plenty with which a gracious Providence had endowed our country. Maybe there were some among us who thanked God that we were not as other people were. But these must have been few. Already the sounds of war were echoing on our doorsteps, and the festivities were shot through with a general sense of foreboding that our ocean ramparts would soon be swept away by the engulfing tide of war. Three weeks later the Nation woke up to find itself one with a world in arms.

So, this Thanksgiving Day finds the Nation sharing the experience of war with a host of other peoples. To be sure, our fair land is not ravaged as are those of many of our Allies. We still have far more of the good things of life to put on Thanksgiving tables than the rest of the United Nations. Blood, tears and sweat we have expended, but not in the same measure as our Allies have. However, the celebration finds our Nation moving irresistibly toward the battlefields upon which already so many millions of the world's manhood are interlocked. Thus there is a unique note of universality in the great festival today. We are working, fighting and rejoicing together as members of the United Nations.

The spread of this Nation overseas is, indeed, the background of today's Thanksgiving. Our Main Streets are now everywhere—on the hot desert sands of Africa, in the jungles of the Solomons, amid the bleakness of Iceland and on board the ships of a Navy scattered over the seven seas and scarred with the wounds of war. Associated with them in today's festivities will be their foreign comrades-in-arms. In Britain steps have been taken to reproduce the atmosphere of home for the American soldiers who are stationed there. From the King down to the humblest villager the British intend to focus in their entertainment of the American troops their own thanksgiving. Of fare, perhaps, there will not be an abundance. But goodwill will make up for the paucity of good cheer, and home will thus come true in the best sense for many a lonely American. Elsewhere the miracle of radio will establish the physical link of a common rejoicing between the two Americas—the fighting America and the working America.

There will also be uniqueness in the reason for our gratitude today. Down the years the fullness of our good earth has been the theme of our Thanksgiving. It was the corn to which the Indians introduced the hungry Pilgrims that was in the thoughts of those early settlers. God's bounty has endowed every succeeding generation of Americans with many and diverse forms of human sustenance. But today it is exemplified in those things which have combined to turn the fortunes of war in our favor. Some of those things are resources that only a year ago were devoted to catering to our material satisfactions. They now are turning out war goods, and thus are fighting for our survival. If the national fare is a trifle slimmer in consequence, the wonder is that we are able to eat almost as usual when so much of our economy is on war work. Anyway, on this occasion, there should be more prayer than feasting. For the hand of Providence has proved itself within 12 months of our entry into war both shield and buckler.

Red Offensive

According to the Russians, close to 100,000 German soldiers have been killed or captured since the Red army launched its present offensive in the Don-Volga corridor less than a week ago. These figures may be exaggerated. But, discount them as we may, the fact remains that a blow of staggering dimensions has been and is being dealt the Wehrmacht. It is one from which, moreover, the Nazi war machine may never be able to recover.

It was just over three months ago that the German army arrived at Stalingrad and began to lay siege to that important industrial center on the Volga. Few outside of Russia believed at the time that Stalingrad would long hold out. Certainly, that was the view of the German high command, which allowed broad hints to be circulated in Germany that Stalingrad's doom was sealed. But Stalingrad did hold out. And now Hitler's tenuous grip on the city is about to be broken. The offensive which the Red army has launched from points to the northwest and southwest of Stalingrad, however, threatens to do more than break the Nazi positions. It threatens to trap a German force estimated at 300,000 men and imperil all the gains made by Hitler in the Caucasus this year. But even if the Russian drive falls short of that goal, it will have accomplished a tremendously important purpose.

In thus turning the tables on Hitler, the Red army has destroyed the last dwindling possibility of a Nazi victory. With the Russians on the march in the east, and the Allies entrenched over a large part of the North African coast, Hitler's difficulties are enormously multiplied. He now has an entire continent and some 6000 miles of border to defend. This at a time when all of conquered Europe is seething with hatred for the conqueror and stirred by the great hope that Hitler's doom is now certain.

The Russians themselves realize fully the enormous effort that must still be made before the Nazis are finally and irrevocably crushed. They are keeping a tight check on their enthusiasm. Nonetheless, the events of the past week on the Eastern Front plus the earlier developments in Africa promise that while the end of the war may still be far off, its outcome is no longer in doubt.

Job For Jeffers

There is, it seems to us, but one way in which to settle the controversy about Nation-wide gasoline rationing. That is to tell the country, as Rubber Director Jeffers suggests, the facts about the rubber situation as simply and convincingly as is humanly possible. Everybody knows by this time that the over-all purpose of Nation-wide rationing is to save rubber. But there have been so many conflicting estimates both of our rubber situation now and of the likely situation a year from now that critics of rationing have been unwilling to accept as a basic premise the need for rationing.

This is proved by the nature of their criticism. Postcards mailed to Washington by the thousands protest rationing merely on the ground that it is believed unnecessary. Yesterday, a House committee recommended a six-month postponement of rationing "to see what complete voluntary tire saving will accomplish." Such objections to immediate rationing plainly reveal the failure of rubber authorities to make any real impression on the public.

This can be partially explained, of course, by the difficulty of estimating the success of the synthetic rubber program in the months ahead. But in the absence of exact information, more and more persons have taken the attitude that they have got to be shown before they will submit to rationing. Whether this attitude—which indicates a willingness to gamble that there will be enough rubber without rationing—is unpatriotic or morally invalid or economically unsound, is beside the point, now that opposition to rationing has developed on so large a scale. The crying need is for rubber estimates that will set forth indisputably just what we are up against. It is a job that, in the first instance, falls on Mr. Jeffers and his associates.

Doriot Dead?

In that competition in infamy in which Jacques Doriot and Pierre Laval were for years engaged, Doriot never came off more than second best. That was not because he was any less black-hearted than Laval. In this respect it was a case of six of one and half a dozen of the other. Like Laval, though for a long time more openly, Doriot was always prepared to betray his country and his countrymen to the Nazis. The difference between them was that Laval was a far abler and more subtle schemer than Doriot. Like Doriot, a man who began his political career on the extreme Left, Laval shifted his ground whenever it served his advantage. But, unlike Doriot, who never got further than the outer circle of the political bull's-eye, Laval was again and again a successful bidder for high office.

That was true in the days of the Third Republic. And it was equally true in the period following the armistice and the betrayal of France to the enemies of civilization. Doriot made Paris his headquarters, presumably to be near his Nazi patrons. Laval remained in Vichy, intrigued from within, and got his hand on the administration. Doriot, although openly and vociferously a candidate for "high" office, never got there. If reports from London are to be believed, he has now met his just fate. Set upon by French patriots after a meeting at which he had urged a declaration of war on the Allies, Doriot is said to have died from wounds. If that is true, and we can only hope the report is not exaggerated, there is now one fewer traitor in France.

POPCORN

By the fire's inviting light
It is good to crouch at night
While this corn, swayed to and fro,
Pops—as crisp and white as snow,
Pops—white blossoms in a cloud!
No one who has ever bowed
Over popcorn can forget
Magic . . . teasing even yet,
Fragrance . . . tweaking many a nose
From its too-accustomed pose.
Popcorn danced for many a year—
Onward to the last frontier,
In log cabins when the snow
Hushed the forest long ago,
In sod houses when the wind
To a starving wolf-howl thinned . . .
Pop—the hardness where it hid
Vanishes; against the lid
Beats the sudden crisp delight,
While the coals are glowing bright,
Pop—if despots still can be—
This is something breaking free!

Thanksgiving 1832

Rereading my grandfather's diary, which he kept from January 1, 1832, to May, 1836, I came across an item which I thought might prove of interest to you at this time:

"Georgetown, D. C., Nov. 20, 1832—I find in Print that next Thursday is to Be Observed as a day of thanksgiving, it is the first time that there has Ben any observance of that day of Public thanks in this Part of the world. I hope it will Be a General one to all who feel like Observing the same."

And under the date of "Nov. 22, 1832—Today is the day Set apart for thanksgiving day But it is only Observed By the presbyterians it is not so much thought of as was antisipated there was a meeting held at the Presbyterian Church and through the whole order."

Witch Burnings

Strange how the age-old canard persists that "witches were burned" in New England.

We have its revival in the current motion picture, "I Married a Witch." Not a single witch was burned in New England; 19 were hanged; 1 pressed to death.

We must go to Europe for witch burning: "In the little city of Treves alone over 7000 witches were put to death; and the number killed in European countries is estimated at 300,000. Moreover, the torture burning and unspeakable barbarism of European trials were sternly suppressed at Salem."

By Way Of Pronunciation

On Saturday The Washington Post published an editorial about the spelling and meaning of the name "Guadalcanal." The editorial gives as an authority a correspondent to The New York Times, Mr. James L. Quesada of Pelham Manor, N. Y., and states: "The first syllable 'Guad' is a word of Arabic origin meaning 'river,' or in some cases 'valley,' which abounds in Spanish place names throughout both the Old and New Worlds—Guadalajara, Guadalupe, etc. The second syllable 'al' is, of course, our old friend the Arabic definite article already absorbed into numerous English words such as 'alcohol,' 'alchemy,' 'algebra' and so on. 'Canal' is a Spanish word meaning 'channel,' and obtained from the same root from which we obtained it ourselves, namely, the Latin canna or reed. And there you are—Guadalcanal, 'river of the channel.' This was the name by which the place was actually christened long ago by its discoverer."

It seems very doubtful that the Arabic-speaking Moors who conquered Spain and gave the Andalusian town its name would tack a Spanish word "canal" to the Arabic definite article "al" preceded by another Arabic word "wadi" which means "intermittent stream" (i. e. a valley or dry river bed carrying water after showers or periods of rain), and which has become "guad" in many Spanish place names. Undoubtedly "canal" is another Spanish corruption of some Arabic word. In a recent issue of The New York Times, another correspondent writes: "The original Guadalcanal means 'Valley of the Stalls' (Wadi al Khanat) from the refreshment stalls which the Arab conquerors found awaiting them when they invaded Andalusia." I do not know from what source the correspondent has obtained this information, but it seems very plausible that this explanation is correct. His "khanat" is apparently the Arabic word "hanat" meaning shop, stand, etc.

As for the spelling "Guadalcarar," The Post editorial says: "However, the fact that the Melanesian natives are as much incapable of pronouncing the sound of 'l' as our Jap friends are of pronouncing the sound 'r' doubtless accounts for the confusion." It is true that the sound "l" and "r" are used intermittently in the many languages and dialects of the Pacific, but the Japanese have no "l" in their language at all, nor can they pronounce this sound. On the other hand the sound of "r" occurs frequently in Japanese. Thus, a Japanese would pronounce London "Rondon." A. N.

Washington, Nov. 23.

Referring to esteemed editoriar regarding correct speaking of Guadarcanar, so sorrow. Excuse prease. Honorabre Editor make mistake. Japanese have one smarr Engrish ranguage difficurty. Cannot say one useress retter. Retter R can say very fine. When conquer Engrand and America, our Emperor strike this useress retter out of arphabet. Wirr be reguration of Heaven. HARRY KIRI.

Washington, Nov. 23.

A wise man once said one should know his enemy. Else, how defeat him? That being the case, it is unfortunate that the otherwise very accurate Washington Post should inadvertently help to perpetuate a mistaken idea about the inability of the Japanese to pronounce the sound of "r." Quite the contrary. "R's" abound, and they cannot pronounce the sound of "l." Too, the editorial " 'Guadalcanal' It Is," has the Japanese pronouncing San Francisco as if the initial sound were "Th" instead of more conveniently using the "San," a word common with them, the "a" being pronounced by them as the "a" in father, and having among its various meanings "mountain," "three," and the general honorific title following a surname, "Mr., Mrs., Miss, etc." As a matter of fact, there is no "Th" sound in the language at all.

"Guadalcanal" is, in Japanese proper, pronounced phonetically as "Gu-a-da-ru-ka-na-ru," and "San Francisco as "Sa-n-fu-ra-n-shi-su-ko." "Than Flanthithko" would not be a convenience for the Jap admiralty, but a fine way of confusing them.

MILDRED E. WILLIAMS.

Washington, Nov. 22.

The Japanese find it difficult to say "l" but easy to say "r." The Chinese do not say "r"; they say "l" instead, so we have the old joke of the Chinaman asking the American if he wants to eat "lice" instead of "rice." The Japanese say "r" instead of "l." The Koreans use both sounds. It is a small matter to us, of course, but still it is not so small to our Asiatic friends.

Right To Vote

What may minority groups living within a democracy expect to be the fate of the four freedoms and the Atlantic Charter if our surrender to the poll-tax filibuster has tipped our real attitude? Many people have already begun to wonder.

The right to vote for national electors is the constitutional right of every citizen of the United States who has not been convicted of a felony and the right may not be abridged by State action. Speaking through Mr. Justice Moody, our own Supreme Court has declared: "Privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States are only such as may arise out of the nature and essential character of the National Government, or are specifically granted or secured to all persons or citizens by the Constitution of the United States." Twining v. New Jersey, 211, U. S. 97 (1908).

Commenting on this case in his "The Supreme Court," at page 181, Charles Evans Hughes says, "Thus among the rights and privileges of national citizenship are the right to petition Congress for the redress of grievances, the right to vote for national electors. . . . Rights of this character are protected from State action."

It would seem, therefore, that a well-prepared case in the courts would settle this question and there is no need for another constitutional amendment to do again what the people of the United States have already done through the Fourteenth Amendment. This amendment says: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

Unfortunately this filibuster has been merely another manifestation of that post-Civil War hysteria which has so persistently colored our political action and retarded the progress of free government. Somewhere along the way we ought to wake up and eliminate both of our major political parties with their historical Civil War backgrounds and substitute in their stead political organizations in which the line of cleavage will be liberalism or conservatism and the War Between the States forgotten.

Print Your Destination

My work requires me to drive from Arlington to Washington and to various localities throughout Arlington. Yesterday I stopped three times to offer a lift to pedestrians. The first was a woman. She thanked me, but said she would wait for the bus. The second was a man walking along the road east of Arlington a long way from any settlement. He thanked me, but said he was walking for exercise. The third was a naval lieutenant, who thanked me, but said he had only a block farther to go.

The purpose of this letter is to suggest that those who want a lift give the drivers a little cooperation. If they will take a sheet of business letter paper, print their destination across it in large letters and hold it up where drivers can see it some distance ahead. I think they will find that they will get the lift they want. They should select a spot where the driver can stop without danger of collision or without violation of la

Morale In Germany

Whether you think you have much or little to be thankful for, however, include in your Thanksgiving reverie some five to six million men confined to overcrowded, closely guarded, barb-wired prison camps—the captured soldiers of the war in Europe, Africa, the Philippines and Asia.

It was not written for Thanksgiving Day, or even by an American, yet it would be difficult to find a more appropriate, if unintentional, illustration of the true, timeless spirit of humble thankfulness to an inspiring, protecting and benevolent Providence than the following excerpts from a letter written by a British officer held captive somewhere in Germany—an answer for any who would ask even now, "What is there really to be thankful for?"

"A sense of proportion, a sense of humor, are prisoners' friends. If I seem to be flippant in treating of a few of my thoughts, I will only add that some there are that 'lie too deep for tears.' . . .

"Very soon I learned that my perceptions had not been blunted. It was like feeling one's leg—no, feeling one's head—after a bad fall.

"We were all obliged to have our heads shaved to the scalp when we arrived. It was a sight to gladden the heart of a phrenologist—1000 hairless pates!

"Our hair has grown again, but I think it proper to place on record the fact that the shapes of the heads of a representative group of 1000 British officers is no criterion of race, heredity, intellect or temperament.

"'What is that major thinking about?' I asked myself. His cranium, shorn of doubtless luxuriant locks, was, I remember, rhomboid. 'He is thinking what I am thinking,' myself replied. How that for a quarter of a century he had smoked tobacco in countless forms, and that now he was smoking chestnut leaves (or the fiber of walnuts), and liking it . . .

"In the curling smoke of my chestnut leaves, I have recalled juvenile experiences with the 'ersatz' tobacco of school days. But we have other boyish traits inherent in us. There is a system of barter, known as 'swapping,' which has given me to think furiously. For some lean months one of the common equations was: 'One inch of bread—four cigarettes.' I thi[n]k that some sort of swapping is p[ro]bably the basis of much city b[u]siness; many of my prison acqu[ai]ances will make postwar f[or]tunes . . .

"Outdoor amusements are [ne]urally harder to find, and oft[en] just walks around and around a[n] around the exercise ground. I have wondered whether this circumambulation will leave any lasting effect? It would be very strange suddenly to find oneself in, say, the Cromwell Road, with unlimited 'straight'.

"The gyration of walking exercise is generally undertaken in pairs. A partner is selected partly because of his good company, partly because he has the same 'gear ratio.' I think that the exercise ground is very like shipboard—there is the very tall with the very short man, albeit equally geared, partner; even the lonely one. Snatches of conversation too might be from the lips of those to whom Poona and the Pyramids are no mystery. Even the curling, when the center of the ground was flooded, this month, reminds me of deck quoits. But, thank goodness, we don't roll! . . .

"As on the free sea, so in the prison camp! I think we haven't time enough . . . I think, when I go to bed, of so many things I meant to do during the day . . .

"The mind, receptive at night, is dangerously nostalgic—yet I think that it is a proper and wholesome thing to allow one's thoughts to go beyond the barriers, yes, even to fly home—so long as one insists on a short and happy pilgrimage. In the clear Alpine twilight I study again and again the snapshots of the family sent by my wife. Surely photographs are the least bulky but most perfect present, and between them and my letters I can slip away, hundreds of miles, to my home . . .

"Thanks to the Y. M. C. A. there are the instruments necessary for an excellent orchestra. It is astonishing Low many will wait an hour in a 'queue' so as to receive seats for a concert . . .

"Then we have almost a university atmosphere . . . and that 'extra-mural' course is taken by almost everyone A subaltern who is a barrister in civil life is studying shorthand, a professional soldier is studying bee-keeping. I wonder why I have hardly missed a single lecture on architecture, or why Robinson, who is well over 50, is learning Spanish? 'Castles in the air?' 'Castles in Spain?'

"There is a superb view. Mountains limit our horizon; ever-changing woods fill the middle distance; a big river runs at the foot of our prison walls and almost washes the barbed wire. Just across the bridge there is a clean little village. There is a constant stream of people on the bridge—those who are free to come and go—

"And now it is bedtime. Someone offers 'A pfennig for your thoughts.'

"'I was thinking of the date, if you must know it.'

"'The 30th of January? Why?'

"'Oh, well. Charles I dies that day—'

"But he wouldn't understand. It happens to be my birthday—

"I am thinking—as I have never so deeply thought before—that I am lucky to be alive!"

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Great Adventure

MR. HOOVER tells us that at least 500 million people will be short of food and will have to be fed when the war ends and we may well believe him. For in this field he has been for a quarter of a century the foremost authority, and he is today the leading elder statesman to whom Governor Lehman and all who organize the operation of relief and rehabilitation must turn for guidance and for help.

LIPPMANN

Naturally enough there will be many who will think that such enormous misery cannot be relieved without impoverishing our own people. In fact, there is already an anxiety that in our desire to relieve this misery we shall send goods abroad that we cannot spare and that we shall open the gates to an immigration that we cannot assimilate. The anxiety is honest but if we proceed wisely and act efficiently, the anxiety will prove to be groundless.

ON THE ASSUMPTION that we win the war and succeed in establishing a political and military peace which gives men confidence that there will not be another great war for a long time to come, there is no reason to think that there will be any strong pressure of peoples to come into the United States. On the contrary, the general movement of peoples should be the other way—provided we have the prudence to make the initial investments which can open up opportunity in the outer world.

Many of the Americans who are now moving out into all parts of the world will find a satisfying life's work in the development of the vast undeveloped regions of the globe. They will open up new frontiers as their forefathers did. Many of those who have found asylum here since Europe became a prison will go back to their homes, or to the new lands which will be calling for enterprising men with special knowledge.

Only if we allow the world to sink into a morass of misery will America be faced with the dilemma of granting asylum or of condemning human beings to incalculable suffering. If, on the other hand, we use the power which victory will give us to make the world safe for the humble and open for the enterprising, we can without uncharity maintain the immigration laws, and we shall find that a strong tendency to emigration will in fact set in.

It is true that in the very first postwar period, which Mr. Hoover calls "the acute period," we shall have to share our food and certain other supplies with the war-stricken peoples abroad. But this period need not be long. Mr. Hoover reminds us that after the last war it lasted from November, 1918, until after the harvest of 1919. This time it may last through two harvests, but it need not be longer than that—provided we use the world-wide supply system built up for war purposes to lend them or give them the tools and the materials to become self-sustaining again. The human capacity for recuperation is greater than we think. And so is the adaptability of men. In London, for example, I was told on the highest authority that if priorities for certain fertilizers could be obtained, the British Isles which for a century have depended on imported food, could within a year grow 90 per cent of the necessary food supply.

We have, however, a greater end to achieve than to save men from dying of hunger and ourselves from having to live in a world scourged by pestilence, and of being faced thereafter, as Mr. Hoover says, with masses of "physical degenerates and potential gangsters." Our greater end is to prime the pump which will, so to speak, cause the desert to bloom—to make the initial investments in the form of materials, and technical knowledge and promotion, which will start the undeveloped regions of the world on a great development. In the primitive places this means, after political security is established, communications and public works and the exploration of their hidden resources. In the sparsely inhabited and poorer countries it means the encouragement of the simpler industries which, in the natural evolution of things, will become the foundation of the more complex capital goods industries.

THIS PROSPECT is certain to arouse the fear in many minds that in promoting prosperity abroad we shall impoverish ourselves. This fear that one man's or one country's gain is another man's or another country's loss is undoubtedly the greatest obstacle to human progress. It is the most primitive of all our social feelings, and the most persistent and obstinate prejudice which we retain from our barbarian ancestors. It is upon this prejudice that civilization has foundered again and again. It is in this prejudice that all schemes of conquest and exploitation are engendered. It is this prejudice which causes almost all men to think that the Golden Rule is a counsel of perfection which cannot be followed in the world of actual affairs.

Yet the belief that our neighbor's gain is our loss is quite contrary to the facts of life in the modern world. New York and Chicago and Detroit are richer, not poorer, if the people of the rest of the country are prosperous, and the United States will be richer, not poorer, if the rest of the world prospers. To doubt this basic truth of human society is to believe at bottom in the philosophy of the robber barons and the Nazis—namely that a few can be rich by exploiting others. It is to deny the elementary basis of our economic life, which is that where there is a seller there must be a buyer, and that there can be no lasting profit in the exchange unless the exchange is profitable to both.

THE FEAR then is groundless that the promotion of prosperity in the outer world will diminish our own. It will enhance it—if only we do not suffer the catastrophe of a reaction like that of the Harding Administration, which saddles us with a postwar Administration composed of men who do not understand the dynamics of the modern social order. In 1920 no one understood them, and so there was some excuse for the disastrous follies into which we landed ourselves. But since 1920 men have discovered the principle of prosperity.

This discovery is much the most important advance in human knowledge in modern times. It is the discovery that government can by the proper use of public funds create a condition of full employment for all its people. Heaven help the Administration which refuses to apply this knowledge in the postwar world. For the war has demonstrated conclusively that unemployment is now an unnecessary and therefore an intolerable evil. The prime lesson of the war in domestic affairs will be that by the proper use of a small fraction of the funds now devoted to engines of destruction, the country can become productive beyond anything ever imagined, and on that productiveness it can maintain a high and rising level of prosperity.

IN THE freedom from want men find freedom from fear. And when they cease to fear, they begin to realize their powers and to believe, as men should when they are worth their salt, that they are only at the beginning and that they are not at the end of the great human adventure.

Canadian Gold

By Jane R. Keith

Production Tapers Off

RECENT action of WPB in ordering all United States gold mines to shut down within 60 days has brought a storm of protest from American gold-mining interests. The main bases of their complaints seem to be twofold. First, they claim that the shutdown will not actually have the effect of releasing large numbers of miners for the base-metal industry. Whereas WPB hopes to see as many as 4000 men switched over to copper mining, spokesmen for the mine operators say the actual number may be as low as 750.

Second, operators do not consider it fair that their mines should be closed down while the United States continues to buy gold, at $35 an ounce, from countries where gold mines still are being allowed to operate full blast.

U. S. Purchase of Imports

Early in the spring, the Mining Association of Montana asked in a letter to WPB:

"In the event that our gold and silver mines are presently compelled to close down, will the United States Treasury still continue to pay $35 an ounce for gold produced in the British Commonwealth, especially in Canada?

"Are the British maintaining gold and silver production in Canada and South Africa while the United States' gold and silver mines are facing shutdown, and are we under Lend-Lease providing machinery and supplies for this, or permitting them to do so, which is much the same thing?"

There has been some justification for the continued production of gold in the British Empire. It has been used to pay for war supplies imported from the United States and South America. Now, however, the picture is changed. Australia cannot, in her present emergency, spare men or material for gold mining, and her mines are being closed down quite rapidly. South Africa presents a specialized problem. Curtailment in that country must be very gradual, since any sudden shutdown would disrupt the entire national economy, throw half the population out of work, bankrupt the government, and have serious political repercussions.

In Canada, gold mining was considered essential to the war effort during the first years of the war. Gold exports to the United States paid for a large proportion of the war supplies which Canada had to import. But at the present time, Canada is worried less about her foreign exchange position than about her manpower shortage. Having been assured by Washington of an ample supply of United States dollars, but not having been assured by anyone of an ample supply of labor, the Canadian government has at last clamped down on gold-mining operations.

A recent statement of the minister, while not so drastic as the WPB order, is clear enough in its implications: "While war requirements already have effected a decline in gold output in Canada and in employment in gold mining, the government has found it necessary to issue instruction that plans be formulated for further curtailment of gold mining . . . These plans will be carried out in step with war requirements and with the ability to make effective use of labor and materials which will thereby be released." The statement added that gold mines which produce substantial quantities of minerals or metals essential for war purposes are not likely to be affected.

Curtailment of Canadian gold mining is expected to be a gradual process, similar to that which will take place in other "nonessential" industries. The industry itself will make a complete survey of how many men it would need to operate on a minimum basis, and how many men it could release in a complete shutdown. Men will not be released from the gold-mining industry until Selective Service has a definite place for them in war jobs.

Diversion Has Begun

Already 750 men from the northern gold mines have been transferred to nickel and copper mines. It is expected that they will be followed in due course by another 2000 miners. Evidence that output already is dropping lies in the fact that gold production for the Province of Ontario has fallen 11.6 per cent in the last nine months.

There are sound reasons why Canada has adopted the policy of gradual curtailment, rather than that of a sudden shutdown. The Canadian gold-mining industry is 10 times greater per capita than that of the United States, and a shutdown would, therefore, cause much greater dislocation. Whereas the United States gold industry is located in fairly populous areas, Canada's mines are for the most part in isolated parts of the north. Whole communities would be faced with ruin if the government closed the gold mines before it had arranged for other war industries to take their place. Most Canadian mines are of such a nature that the cost of maintaining them on a shutdown basis would be very high. (Estimates mention 7500 men and a yearly cost of 25 million dollars.) It might even cost more to maintain a shutdown than to continue operation on a minimum basis.

South Africa At War

By Kenneth Stonehouse

Wholehearted Effort Against The Axis

WHEN BRITON clashed with Boer in the war of 1899-1902, Jan Smuts, now South Africa's most distinguished leader and soldier and one of the few great statesmen of the world, led his commandos—bands of guerillas who gave their name to the raiders of today—against the enemy. Peace resulted in the four provinces—Cape of Good Hope, Orange Free State, Natal and Transvaal, being consummated into the Union of South Africa. Now Smuts, who has been a friend of Britain ever since, is Prime Minister of a country that is completely free and independent within the British Commonwealth.

At this moment he is in London.

Today Smuts is the inspiration and the symbol of South Africa's war effort, the story of which is no less romantic and enthralling than that of the country's growth to manhood.

Defenseless When War Began

When, on September 6, 1939, South Africa declared war, she was as defenseless as any country could be. If Hitler had wanted—and been able to—her great gold mines, producing one-sixth of the world's supply, were his for the taking. South Africa had no navy. Her planes, mostly Junkers from Germany, built to carry passengers, were out of date. Her air strength totaled 26 general-purpose machines, 40 trainers and 2 solitary bombers. Her army, made up of a small permanent force and several regiments of peacetime, part-time citizen soldiers, numbered 39,000 men, both English-speaking and Afrikaans-speaking, the latter the descendants of the Dutch settlers whose language is now called Afrikaans. She had only a handful of gun shells, two old tanks, two rickety armored cars and two armored trains. Fifty per cent of her four strategically vital harbors had no defense whatever—not even a popgun!

But South Africa, a young and vigorous country like America, was not daunted. She quickly "got down to it," and the result was that out of a white population of only 2,200,000 people, she produced a volunteer army of 200,000 men—a higher percentage than anywhere else in the world. To equal that record, the United States would have to have a force of 13 million men. There is no draft or conscription of any kind in the Union. Out of nothing, South Africa built with incredible speed a war industry which not only supplied herself with every imaginable kind of weapon but enabled her to send, war suplies to England, the Middle East and elsewhere.

Little more than a year after South Africa started from "scratch," her tall, brawny sons drove "Mussolini's millions" out of Abyssinia and East Africa, fighting on terrain of the most primitive type. They marched tirelessly over thousands of miles of virgin ground, torn by thornbushes, choked with intense heat and dust which made them unrecognizable, traversed waterless deserts, steep valleys, often frozen and sunblistered in turn. When they charged the enemy with fixed bayonets they shouted the Zulu warcry—and once in 94 days they covered 1500 miles.

With Abyssinia freed, South Africa's warriors turned their faces to the western desert, where they fought with great distinction under General Wavell, later General Ritchie, General Auchinleck and now General Alexander, barring the Axis from Egypt and the Suez, while their country sent ever-increasing quantities of munitions to help the imperial forces.

South Africa had her own steel industry before the war and a great electric power project, both of which have, of course, proved invaluable. The workshops of her state-owned railways quickly became arsenals for war equipment. The mint turned out millions of bullets instead of money. In six months a shell factory was erected and in production, though nobody as first knew how to build it. A steel plant mushroomed in six weeks. A plant for bottling soft drinks now produces howitzers, a match factory pours out bombs with the same facility, another commercial enterprise makes armored cars and collapsible plane hangars—and descendants of the Zulus who fought for Dingaan now ladle molten metal into three-legged pots.

South Africa is a veritable storehouse of strategic minerals, for besides gold and diamonds she has a wealth of asbestos, chrome, coal, corondum, fluorspar, manganese and platinum.

The United States, with characteristic foresight, has been quick to realize how much she and South Africa can be of mutual help to each other in the matter of supplies. Some months ago America sent its first economic mission to the Union to investigate the country's potential resources, and her possible needs from America as well as her exports. American expert David C. Sharpstone is in South Africa now studying the Union's base-metal possibilities to see how deliveries to the United States can be increased. With him worked Corwin Wichersham of the Board of Economic Warfare and Hickman Price, a member of the mission, recently returned to report to the United States Government. He told newspapermen he was greatly impressed with South Africa's war effort and the country's enormous possibilities.

At the same time there is in Washington the South African Purchasing Mission, headed by Mr. John Martin, the object of which is to secure the efficient and regular supply of strategic war materials from the United States.

Coast Is Well Guarded

With Japan in the Indian Ocean, it would be a sorry day for the United Nations if the yellow man laid hands on the four South African gateways—Cape Town, East London, Port Elizabeth and Durban—and Smuts has seen to it that the coast is well guarded and patrolled. It has been reported that U-boat warfare around the Cape of Good Hope had been intensified.

Americans who do not know South Africa may think, when they read news items about sabotage and political dissension in South Africa, that the country is not wholeheartedly behind the war effort. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Although the number of Afrikaans-speaking (Dutch) people is roughly 60 per cent, to 40 per cent English-speaking, it is a fact that the number of "Afrikaners" in the military services exceeds that of their English-speaking comrades. And there are no better soldiers than the descendants of Piet Retief. It is true that bitter memories of the South African War persist among a minority, that this minority still cherish hatred for the British, and that one party led by Dr. D. R. Malan, a bigoted clergyman, wish South Africa to be a republic outside of the British Commonwealth.

All these things exist, but such is the greatness of Smuts and the spirit of the majority of the people generally, who love freedom as much as the Americans, that the "diehards" are left feebly protesting while the country's very strength and will surge forward to help defeat the Axis.

There has arrived in Washington a well-known South African journalist, whose mother tongue is Afrikaans, but who speaks English as fluently. He is attached to the South African Legation in Massachusetts Avenue. He can tell you the story of South Africa far beter than I can.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Man And Ration

Mr. Twitchell took two more letters from ration boards from the letterman and weighed them carefully. Then he handed them back. "Sorry. Can't use 'em," he said. "I've already had my two and a half pounds this week."

"Get the sugar bowl," he commanded, addressing Mrs. Twitchell.

"What for?" she asked.

"Got to turn in all but five lumps," he said.

* * * *

Elmer then stood on his head in the middle of the living room and put on his glasses.

"What on earth are you doing now," demanded Mrs. Twitchell.

"Got to copy the serial numbers on the sidewalls of all my oil burners," he snapped.

At this point, Mrs. Twitchell went upstairs and quietly summoned the doctor.

* * * *

The doctor arrived as Elmer was leaning over a table repeating his name and address over and over again and giving his height, age and color of eyes.

"Elmer, what are you doing now?" asked the wife.

"Just another registration," he snapped.

The doctor motioned to Mrs. Twitchell to sit down and whispered that it would be better just to observe Elmer without any comment for a while.

* * * *

Elmer took from his pocket a small thermometer and held it in his mouth for a few moments. Then he read it. "79 degrees," he announced. "They can make trouble for me for having a temperature like that. I could have avoided it all, though."

Mrs. Twitchell forgot herself and asked, "How?"

"By switching from meat to coal," he barked. "You remember all those warnings that all cars should keep down to two cups a mile."

* * * *

He then went into the kitchen, took the coffee pot and threw it away.

"Got to get something smaller," he said. "Im only an "A" card holder. My allowance is to be cut to three gallons a week now. Used to be allowed four. Tried to join a Share-the-Mocha club but couldn't do it."

Elmer walked to the telephone. "Hello. Is this Henderson?" he asked. "Just want to tell you about the butter. It was worth retreading so I called the express company and turned it in."

* * * *

"Quite a case," observed the doctor, making notes.

Mr. Twitchell now got a can of gasoline, poured out a small quantity, added condensed milk, a pinch of sugar and proceeded to drink it.

"Tastes lousy," he said, "but a ration order is a ration order."

Suddenly he put the cup aside and remarked, "I forgot this was a coffeeless Tuesday."

* * * *

"How long has he been acting like this?" asked the doctor.

"Just for the last day or two," said Mrs. Twitchell.

"Who's that?" demanded Elmer, suddenly noticing the doctor. "Ah, I recognize him now. He's the Federal furnace inspector. It's okay, inspector. I laid my furnace up for the winter and am heating the house by bicycle now."

The doctor at this point sneaked up behind Elmer and slugged him with a heavy paperweight, knocking him cold.

"It's the only way to handle these cases," he said to Mrs. Twitchell. "I'm getting more of 'em every day."

Burma Next?

By Barnet Nover

Coming Struggle For The China Base

IT WAS JUST over two months ago at a press conference in New Delhi, that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander of the British forces in India, declared that the reoccupation of Burma was something he had very much in mind.

NOVER

"Ever since we lost Burma," he said, "I have been planning its reoccupation, because it is one of the most important elements from the strategic viewpoint. We must reestablish communications with the Chinese and get a base for attack on the positions the Japanese have seized as well as on Japan herself.

"But you can see by studying the map what a difficult problem it is. I have been fighting three years, and always at the wrong end of the supply line.

MUCH HAS HAPPENED during those two months. The United Nations have won smashing victories in the Pacific, in Africa and in Russia. And every one of these developments has an immediate or potential bearing on the situation in the temporarily quiescent India-Burma-China sector.

In the first place the great victory won by our Navy off Guadalcanal November 13-15 has greatly weakened Japanese naval power. The unquestioned naval superiority which the enemy once had has been whittled down, if not destroyed altogether. So it is doubtful whether Japan is any longer in a position to seek that domination of the Indian Ocean without which an attack on India could not safely be launched.

By the same token the Allies are now in a better position than they ever were before to launch an offensive against the Japanese in Burma. Such an offensive would be extremely difficult and costly if undertaken from the land side alone. To be fully successful it must be an amphibious operation, with the recapture of Rangoon one of its principal objectives.

IN THE SECOND place the reversal of the tide in Russia eliminates, at least for the winter, any possibility of a German break-through to the Persian Gulf. It was because of that possibility that a considerable Allied force was assembled in Iran and Irak and elsewhere in the vast region between the eastern Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean.

Part of that Allied Middle East force will now be available for action against the Japanese. And by being able to draw on it General Wavell will no longer be as badly off, so far as his supply line is concerned, as he was when he gave the interview at New Delhi on September 26.

AND LAST, but by no means least, the African developments of the past month may have a revolutionary effect on the situation in the India-Burma-China sector.

If the Axis is thrown out of Tunisia and Tripolitania the Allies will again have full use of the Mediterranean as an artery of traffic, thus reducing by perhaps 8000 miles the distance between England and India and America and India. Furthermore the use of the shorter route will also free a considerable number of Allied naval vessels now engaged in convoying ships around the cape.

TAKING all these factors into account it is hardly surprising, therefore, that the Japanese have begun to reinforce their garrisons and expand their air strength in Burma and the occupied portions of the Chinese Province of Yunnan.

THIS MOVE can obviously serve both a defensive and an offensive purpose—the two are actually indistinguishable in that sector.

It may, on the one hand, inhibit the Allies from launching an assault on Burma in the near future, that is before there has been time to regroup their land, sea and air forces and, on the other hand, enable the Japanese to attempt a drive on Kunming, whose capture would greatly complicate the already difficult Allied-Chinese supply line.

Whether the Japanese will succeed in either endeavor—or both—will depend in large measure on the force which General Wavell already has on hand in India plus the reinforcements that can speedily be rushed to him. And the latter, in turn, may depend to no small degree on the duration and outcome of the fighting in Tunisia.

HERE AGAIN we have a clear-cut demonstration of the fact that all theaters of the war are closely interrelated.

The fight in Tunisia, which Hitler appears to be determined to hold at all costs, has already had a bearing on the Battle of Stalingrad where, among other things, waning Axis air power has enabled the Red army to carry out large-scale offensive operations. That same struggle for the last bit of Africa still in Axis hands may also play a role in coming events in Hither Asia.

The Japanese are keenly aware of what Allied successes in Russia and in Africa, as well as in the Pacific, mean to them. They also realize that Burma, far more than the islands of the southwestern Pacific, may be the key to their fate.

If Burma is reoccupied by the Allies it would then be possible to pour vast supplies into China and use that country as a base for large-scale and continuous attacks on enemy positions all the way from Indo-China to the Japanese islands themselves. Their present effort to increase their military and air strength in Burma is indicative of their alarm.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

At long last, Hollywood has come up with a prize fight story that isn't curdled by the horrible manifestations of a movie actor trying to act like a prize fighter.

POVICH

For the title role in "Gentleman Jim," the delineation of the life of Jim Corbett, Warner Brothers didn't have to search beyond their own lot, moreover handsome Errol Flynn makes a surprising and completely creditable Jim Corbett; finally it's a success job after Hollywood's many sour attempts to produce an actor who seemingly can fight a little bit.

In "The Prize Fighter and The Lady," Maxie Baer was tolerable enough as the fight champ, but his acting ran the gamut of the art from A to B. Back in the old time flickers, Jack Dempsey didn't get any mention for the Oscar, even though Hollywood bobbed his nose and otherwise tried to make him not too awful; Gene Tunney was featured in something called "The Fighting Marine." It was not rated one of the year's thousand best movies.

The movie industry scraped the bottom, though, with its Jack Oakies and Bob Montgomerys in prize-fighting roles. They got the gal, all right, but they sent the ringworms away in anguish. From the fight industry's viewpoint, Hollywood would have been justified in holding up their purses.

But along comes Errol Flynn and "Gentleman Jim," and Hollywood atones for a gob of its sins in the name of prize fighting. What limits the late Corbett might have attained if he had been as handsome as Flynn are only conjectural, because the Corbett schnozzola was not exactly cherubic, but otherwise it is an exceedingly faithful portrayal by Flynn of the dancing-master champion.

Throughout the publicity blurbs from the Warner lot it was hinted vaguely that Flynn used to be on somebody's Olympic boxing team, and that's not incredible. In a way, Flynn's fight job is downright startling. Somewhere the fellow did learn how to fight, but good. And fancy, in the best traditions of Corbett. Never do you get the notion that Flynn is a green pea, either at the snaky left jab for which Corbett was famous or at the Trilby-like footwork that eventually made him champion.

If there is any complaint with Flynn's portrayal of Corbett, it is trifling enough. Flynn shows a punch the likes of which the old dancing master never owned, as far as chilling effect is concerned, but that isn't Flynn fault. The directors gave him that punch. On the fancy Dan side, Corbett himself would probably approve of Flynn's skill. Here's a chap who looks at home in the prize ring.

The cynical and long-suffering prize fight fan, finding himself at another Hollywood fight movie, will undoubtedly expect the worst at the start of "Gentleman Jim." He'll be of a mind that Pat Flaherty, husky brother of the Herald's Vince, and cast as Corbett's brother in the film, could probably lick any of the characters they toss into a prize fight role. But Flynn wins Mr. Fight Fan before the first minute of the first round of his first movie fight. Right away, you see the fellow is better than a green hand.

The story is pretty faithful Corbett, and that's a compliment to Ed Cochrane, the International News Service sports editor, who drew from his font of Corbett lore as the picture's technical advisor. You have Corbett's humble beginnings as a fast-talking young bank clerk in San Francisco who conned his way into the exclusive Olympic Club formed by nouveau riche millionaires of Comstock Lode fame.

As the youngest of the three Corbett brothers, Flynn comes by his zest for fisticuffs honestly enough, what with the internecine hostilities of the Battling Corbetts the scandal of the neighborhood. "The Corbetts are at it again," is the neighborhood shout as Brothers Harry, George and Jim repair to the barn to settle family squabbles with the complete blessing of Daddy Corbett, who is Alan Hale, an uproarious scene-thief throughout the eight reels.

The heart interest is eye-filling Alexis Smith, as Vicki Ware, the daughter of a mining millionaire, who goes for the brash young bank clerk but won't admit it until he meets the champion. It all leads up, of course, to the big fight with Champion John L. Sullivan, at New Orleans, and Ward Bond makes a reasonable Sullivan of that tough job. How Corbett goaded Sullivan into the fight, how he raised the $10,000 side bet that Sullivan demanded is all swell Hollywood.

We wouldn't want to spoil the plot by telling you who won that Errol Flynn-John L. Sullivan fight 50 years ago, but he got the gal.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 25—What an American sports fan has to be thankful for, this year:

Memories, mostly. Memories that will last as long as the memorizers live. A pride, too, in what the muscle business has done for charities, bond drives and national defense. Satisfaction, also, because so many fine athletes justified the trust and respect of the fans by chucking everything to get in uniform.

CONSIDINE

Each day the prospects for survival of sports for the duration seem to grow a little better. The weak events fall off like autumn leaves; the sturdy trunk and limbs of the game remain almost as of old. The war changes the face of sport but not the spirit. Kids you never heard of before came up and packed the big sports places. The old champs, the great old peacetime teams, faltered or removed themselves, and a public that was hungry for a new deal, and thirsty for vital competition as a surcease from their work and worry, hailed those new kids and fresh combinations.

You can be thankful for a guy named Joe Louis, and for Billy Conn, who followed Joe into the Army when he could have stayed out, because of his family, and cleaned up. You can be thankful for the St. Louis Cardinals who brought a fresh, audacious never-quit spirit back to baseball.

Yes, and you can be thankful for Whirly and the plucky Alsab and Bob Feller, Ted Williams, the Pre-Flight football teams, Wisconsin, the one-armed lineman at Tulsa, the determined sports program of the big defense plants, the Bears, the Redskins, Beau Jack and Willie Pep and Ray Robinson, Pancho Segura, the unselfishness of pro and amateur golf stars, the reprieve of hockey, The collegiate freshman rule—and all the things that lie beyond.

What lies beyond will not be a golden age of sport. But nobody wants it that way. What lies ahead, to paraphrase the old story about the gambler who wanted a little action in a strange town, will be the only wheel in town. But nobody ever heard the famed gambler of that story come back to his informant and complained that he had been gypped. He knew what he was getting into, and presumably got a run for his money. That must be the outlook of our sports fans. The events ahead of them may be smaller in size, to wit, the tabloid version of the Army-Navy game, the slaughter in talent, to wit, the heavyweight boxing situation. But the action is still there, lightening the hours of a people groggy from more serious things.

Amen.

Here are the conditions under which Army-Navy tickets are being sold. They are printed on the rear of each ticket.

"This ticket is issued upon the request of an applicant residing within a 10-mile radius of the Maryland State House (Annapolis) and is for the use of himself, or members of his household.

"This ticket will not be honored if resold or offered for resale.

"Should the above conditions be violated the privilege (Ed. Note: the things cost $4.40 a copy) granted by this ticket may be rescinded without recourse at the option of the officials of the Navy Athletic Association.

"Once delivered, this ticket will not be replaced if lost, mislaid, stolen, mutilated or destroyed. Single tickets will not be redeemed. Blocks or two or more tickets will be accepted for redemption, if presented at office of Athletic Association from which they were purchased, not later than 5 p. m. on Wednesday, November 25, 1942."

Reporters covering the wartime renewal of this great grid rivalry must bear a letter from Lieut. H. G. Murray, graduate manager of athletics at the Academy, imprinted with the seal of the Navy Athletic Association. Personal identification must also be carried, and a certain entrance gate to the Academy grounds used. Copies of the letter of credit are sent to the officer in charge of buildings and grounds and to Lieut. D. L. Martineau.

With the same stiff letter of credit, necessary in times of war, comes an invitation to lunch on the Navy.

Four Pro Grid Battlers Fined $50 Each

Layden's Action Ends Argument

Redskin Office Receives 75,000 Ticket Requests For Title Playoff

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The would-be peacemakers were penalized as heavy as the main bout participants for last Sunday's third-quarter fracas in Griffith Stadium as Redskin Ed Justice and Dodger Dean McAdams, who stepped in to halt the Bob Masterson-Perry Schwartz fight, drew $50 fines as well as the principal combatants.

National Football League Commissioner Elmer Layden announced the fines yesterday from Chicago but did not elaborate except to say that the fines covered the crime and there would be no suspensions. Layden levied the fines after a full report of the incident from Referee Sam Weiss.

Schwartz, the Brooklyn end who claimed Masterson intentionally clipped him in a previous meeting in Brooklyn, was the aggressor in the brief battle but blame for the outbreak was equally divided in postgame statements.

McAdams, Brooklyn halfback, was the first player to attempt to break up the running swingfest and Justice added his bit when he claimed McAdams took a swing at Masterson. All four were banished from the game.

"Please Stop Asking"

The Redskin management made an appeal to the public yesterday morning to stop mailing ticket applications for the championship game here with the Chicago Bears December 13 after Jack Espey, general manager, estimated applications had been made for more than 75,000 seats, with mail bags piling into the Ninth Street office. A total of 35,741 seats are available in Griffith Stadium.

Season ticket holders still have until Saturday night to make applications for their usual seats in written request accompanied by a money order or certified check.

The Redskin office force will not be able to complete the task of opening and counting the applications until early next week and then additional help will be re-

Mike Holovak Now Second In Rushing

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Mike Holovak, one of several good reasons why Boston College is rated the Nation's No. 1 football team, finally is getting statistical confirmation of the great job he's doing.

Now the second highest player in individual rushing, Mike can reflect on one of the season's most sensational advances as he looks back to his comparatively low rating of eighteenth on October 10.

The American Football Statistical Bureau reported today that Holovak's mark of 150 yards rushing against Boston University last Saturday vaulted him from fifth to

THANKSGIVING DAY GAMES

Tulane Over Louisiana State: Lou Thomas to outshine Alvin Dark and therefore Tulane to spill Louisiana State although the edge is thinner than a drug-store sandwich.

Tulsa Over Arkansas: The Oklahomans have come this far without being tied or beaten so it is unlikely they will crumble before a Southwest Conference foe that has gone without a win or a draw in its own loop.

William and Mary Over Richmond: Here's where Johnson, Ramsey and company clinch the Southern Conference flag.

Pennsylvania Over Cornell: The wise men say that the Quakers again are the team they were early in the season and that they will be too strong even for Wally Kretz.

Missouri Over Kansas: Ray Evans, one of the country's better passers, is Kansas' main threat but hardly enough to keep Missouri from its second straight Big Six crown.

Texas Over Texas A. and M.: Picking the Longhorns but not by the 23-to-0 margin by which they won a year ago.

Colgate over Brown: Brown hasn't

Central Host to Tech With Title at Stake

Schoolboy Rivals Clash at 2:30 Today At Central Stadium; 8000 Fans Expected

By Bill Burnett

Hometown boys get the spotlight on Washington's sports scene this Thanksgiving Day as Central and Tech High football teams, whose rivalry has become a local institution, come to grips for the second time this year at Central's stadium. The kick-off will be at 2:30.

The championship of the eight public high schools, now held by by Central, hinges on this final and crucial effort. A capacity crowd of 8000 is anticipated for the clash of traditional foes who met for the first time in 1902.

If there is such a thing as a toss-up in scholastic football, this is it. Even the clubs' records over the last 40 years indicate a close battle. Central has won 19 of the outings, Tech 16 and 5 have been ties.

Vikings Won First

This year the teams have been fairly even, too. In their earlier meeting in the regular two-division series it was anybody's game with Central getting a 12-7 margin. Meanwhile the Vikings were composing a record of four won and none lost in the interhigh season, seven won and one lost in all their games. Tech has 3 and 1 in the series, and it won four, tied one and lost two for the year.

In a surprise announcement yesterday Coach John Clarey of Tech revealed Stan Fant, a youngster up from the junior varsity would start at quarterback for the Trainers. Halfbacks Dan O'Connell and Monk Bauers will be in there along with either Sonny Morisette or Jimmy Gilmore at fullback.

Putting up a highly capable front for these lads will be a light but fast forward wall which has pushed the city's best teams around almost at will. George Paul, left tackle, is the burliest member at 198.

Central's array of line talent got a big boost recently when Billy Hall, a transfer from Tennessee, became eligible. The big tackle should be much in evidence today with such dependable performers

W.-L. High Heavy Choice To Win Today

Thrice-beaten George Washington High will be a decided underdog this morning in the annual Old Oaken Bucket game with unbeaten Washington-Lee High on the latter's field in Ballston at 11 o'clock.

The Little Generals also carried a far superior record into last year's Thanksgiving Day clash, but were forced to score the last two touchdowns to get out with a 19-19 tie, the first deadlock since the oaken bucket has become the winner's prize. W-L has won four and lost two since the bucket was donated and in the preceding series George Washington held a 6-4 edge with one tie.

The Little Generals, coached by Harry Deming, will take an edge in weight and experience into the traditional northern Virginia scholastic battle. In the starting backfield for the favorites will be Steve Long, Myron Gerber, Jim Sprinkle and Eddie DeCelle.

The Generals have a generous supply of backfield replacements, but G. W.'s starting quartet, Wallis Scrivener, Julius Caporaletti, Curtis Kirby and Billy Bell, may have to go the route for lack of reserves. Marty Foltz, the leading scorer, recently entered the Coast Guard.

The Presidents have won four, lost three and tied one this year, while the Washington-Lee record includes a victory over Central and a number of outstanding Old Dominion schoolboy elevens.

Blaik Plans Usual Lineup For Navy Game

By the Associated Press

West Point, Nov. 25.—Coach Earl Blaik is contemplating no changes from his regular Army lineup for Saturday's setto with the Navy at Annapolis, but there were indications today that the underclass substitutes who showed up well against Princeton last week would see their share of action.

A Jayvee team demonstrated Navy's running attack to the varsity today and almost every player on the latter squad, including Bobby Woods and Tom Lombardo, the backfield scoring aces against Princeton, were given a chance to show their stuff.

The scrimmage today was the last heavy workout of the season for the Cadets. Another light drill is scheduled for tomorrow, but present plans call for no practice on Friday.

OPA Will Check On Autoists at Army-Navy Game

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 25.—The Office of Price Administration promised to contribute something today to the uneasiness of any spectator at the Army-Navy football game Saturday who was ineligible for tickets.

Cornelius P. Mundy, State OPA enforcement attorney, said OPA inspectors would check automobiles at the game in Annapolis to determine whether any person violated rationing rules or the attendance regulations.

Middies Drill In Secrecy For Contest

Cadets to Arrive Tomorrow, Will Be Quartered at Fort George Meade

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer

Annapolis, Nov. 25.—Navy's footballers went into hiding today, along about the time the bookmakers in these parts established Army's well-drilled machine a 2-to-5 favorite in Saturday's transplanted service scramble.

Now, this is not to say that the betting odds drove the Middies under cover. It was only that Coach Billick Whelchel wanted secret practice—and he wasn't kidding. He put his boys behind lock and key—and then threw the key away for the rest of the week. You had as much chance of taking a peek at the Middies at work as you had of getting samples from the Mint.

Guards Patrol Field

Although no one could quite figure out what it was Billick could show his boys in the last three days that they hadn't learned in two months of gridironing, the practice field was guarded like the last pound of coffee in your Aunt Emma's pantry. Midshipmen managers and regular Naval Academy guards patrolled the place and were ready to put the finger on any "suspicious characters," like working sports writers for instance, who came within shouting distance.

Now, all this mystery may have provided some excitement for the folks in the immediate neighborhood, but the natives of Annapolis, being a hardy lot, were about as steamed up over it as over the horse trough in Church Circle, despite the fact the practice gates were locked about the same time as the Naval Academy announced Saturday's probable starting lineups. These showed a surprisingly close statistical set-up between the two. Navy had a slight edge in over-all weight with an average of 185¼ pounds per man to 183½. But Army's sturdy forces had the bulge where it counted—down the

Odds-on Favorite Fights Off Threat Of Dream Parade; Gilbert Overweight

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Nov. 25.—Mrs. H. W. Jackson's Ariel Patrol might have been an odds-on favorite but he won today's Bethlehem-Fairfield purse the hard way.

In the first place, the son of Ariel had to carry 118 pounds because Jockey Johnny Gilbert couldn't make the weight. Secondly, he had to take a camera verdict to get home in front, and then he was forced to survive a claim of foul against him.

After all was said and done, backers of the 2-year-old colt collected at the rate of $3.40 for each $2 investment.

Few Inches in Front

Ariel Patrol finished a scant few inches in front of H. H. Polk's Dream Parade, with Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Romney Rex third in the blanket ending to the test of 6 furlongs. The three horses were jammed together and Apprentice V. Bracciale, who rode Dream Parade, registered the objection against Gilbert and his mount.

Although it is unfashionable in Maryland to disqualify a 3-to-5 shot, the stewards took a long time before they lighted the official sign to start the pay-offs. Ariel Patrol did bother Dream Parade at the sixteenth pole and when clear, Dream Parade came again and barely failed to get up. In turn, Dream Parade lugged into Romney Rex.

Dream Parade, with closing odds of 10-1, looked like a sweet dream to his backers soon after the start when he opened a long lead. Gilbert appeared content to rate Ariel Patrol closest to the pacemaker while Romney Rex was outrun.

Narrowed Lead In Stretch

Approaching the stretch Ariel Patrol began narrowing Dream Parade's lead. In the meanwhile Romney Rex moved to contention on the inside. The three were almost abreast at the sixteenth pole when the trouble started. The track was muddy and Ariel Patrol turned in time of 1:15 3-5 for the three quarters. A Thanksgiving Eve crowd of 4500 saw he action.

Gilbert also rode Gustave Ring's Hermar to victory in the first race. He brought the son of Sweeping Light home a length and a half in advance of Hard Telling, owned by Mrs. C. M. Greer, jr. J. Morris' Tee Midge was third in this field of a dozen. Hermar paid $25 and set the stage for a $265.10 pay-off in the daily double. J. C. O'Hara's Solar Star won the second race, paying $25.80 and was a half length winner over Double B. with Wise Maiden in third position.

Horton Smith Enlists In Army Air Corps

Springfield, Mo., Nov. 25 (AP).—Horton Smith, 34, star professional golfer, has enlisted in the Army Air forces and was scheduled to take his final physical examination today at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Smith said he decided to enlist because he was "tired of his indefinite status, both as to golf and to military service."

When he was not retained by the Pinehurst, N. C., club this season, Smith returned to his Springfield home.

Again it will be "Booby" Mess, the chunky veteran who really enjoys blocking, in the Viking quarterback slot. Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Lots of action today. Post time for the first race is 1:15 p. m., with the daily double closing at 1 p. m. The $7,500 added Endurance Handicap drew a dozen 2-year-olds, the number Racing Secretary John Campbell predicted. Looks like an open race, too, at the weights. Eat your turkey early or late and get out for the nine-race program. Darrell Clingman and Johnny Tammaro, the two prominent riders at this meeting, left for New Orleans. Willie Turnbull, the New England apprentice sensation, arrived yesterday and will go to Charles Town. Speaking of Charles Town, the Bomar Stable, under Trainer Emmitt Potts, will race there. Apprentice Claude Erickson, who injured his foot, hopes to get back into action today or tomorrow. The betting average for the meeting has gone up to $310,856, which is much better than the weak-kneed thought it would be. Trainer Harris Brown may send Doubirab a mile and three-sixteenths in the Bryan and O'Hara Handicap, the closing day feature here. Doubirab, thought to be only a sprinter, won here over a distance of ground in the Prince Georges Autumn Handicap. Herb Claggett is riding in rare form these days. He has regained his confidence and is getting good mounts. He also plans to go to Charles Town. One of the boys who came down from Pascoag, R. I., said the temperature was below zero one day at the meeting. J. Y. Christmas sold Molasses Jo to his brother, B. F. Christmas, yesterday morning and the son of Challenger II came home a winner a few hours later. Johnny Gilbert is heavy these days. He made 118 pounds yesterday. They tell me Tammaro is going to sign with Valdina Farms. Bowie is almost over and no Art Brown. J. V. Dahl is shipping horses to Florida. Remember Charley Jackson, the ancient colored rider? He is still around and weighs the same as in his riding days. Mickey Brooks, the nationally known press box custodian, got in from Rockingham. I want to see you all on the rail. BILL.

First race—GREY WOLF needs only to get off the reserve list to have an excellent chance in this field. Needed that last outing. BELMIKE was second last out. THORINO is dropping down and may surprise.

Second race—FIDDLER'S BIT is better than that last and could be prominent if not the winner in this field. I'm going to string along. MISTRELLA has shown speed on occasions and is dangerous. GOLDEN REGENT is a fair sort and belongs close.

Third race—GLASTAUDER gets in with featherweight, likes this track and I'm going to be there. BROOKLANDVILLE'S last was promising of better things. COUNTY CORK for the show end.

Fourth race—WAR PAGE is favored by the outside post position and has speed enough to whip this kind. I see no reason for mistakes. GRANLAG downed cheaper ones but is sharp as a tack. TOSS UP for the minor money.

Fifth race—TRELAWNY gets in with 103 pounds and may close enough to down these good sprinters. LAYAWAY is in excellent form and belongs close. BEN GAY disappointed last out and is better than shown.

Sixth race—CHOP CHOP, 120 pounds and all, gets my call in the day's feature. Likes the route and I'm going to string along. VINCENTIVE has trained fairly well and is dangerous. BOLD SALUTE is a long-shot possibility.

Seventh race — CHALDON HEATH was a winner over this track and will be hard to beat at this route. BAY CARSE closed well last out and belongs in the pay circle. OVER may take the show end.

Eighth race—DARE BUNNY galloped here the other day and should come back to take another set of brackets. SILVER ROCKET and MISS DISCOVERY figure close to the top one.

Ninth race—BLOCKADER, GOOD NEIGHBOR and QUIZ KID is the way I prefer them in the day's finale.

Best bet—CHALDON HEATH.

Ernie Dusek, The Villain, Wins Again

Ernie Dusek, the Nebraska Wildcat, maintained a long string of local victories which started about the time horsecars were shuffling up Pennsylvania Avenue, by defeating Morris Shapiro in the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night.

Approximately 900 fans screamed hysterically for Dusek's gore throughout the 29 minutes of hostilities. Meanwhile, Ernie was industriously stomping the (one word censored here) out of Shapiro until Referee Casey Berger finally tired of the mayhem and awarded the laurel to Dusek. Just prior to the end, Dusek had tossed Shapiro out of the ring. When the willing Shapiro returned to battle, Dusek flung him on the mat three times in quick succession and then finished the performance with a series of vicious stomps that could be felt up in the four-bit seats.

Shapiro, a comparative newcomer who shows excellent Commando prospects, did some fancy pitching early in the match and used a right hook that floored the durable Dusek several times.

Berger the Master

Referee Berger renewed his vendetta with Dusek by breaking that worthy's pet holds repeatedly, ruling them to be strangles. Ernie, more than mildly irked, expostulated so strenuously that Berger booted him in the puss once to enforce a point.

Johnny (Tripod) Long, the Sammy Baugh of Washington wrestledom, worked to a tough draw with George Becker in a semi-final that was as scientific as the Bureau of Standards and as clean as a Disney movie. Both men are accomplished tumblers and treated the patrons to a half hour of pure science.

Once they almost outdid themselves when each got a leglock that prevented the other from any maneuvering. Stymied, they wriggled like a pair of Siamese eels, and it looked as though the management would have to page a plumber to unravel them.

However, Berger, an ex-wrestler himself, finally untangled them after a deal of tugging and hauling. It was would have been almost as easy to dock the U. S. S. Washington in the Tidal Basin.

The Mask Wins

The Yellow Mask, a fearsome fellow with an underslung jaw, won his second successive match when he disposed of moustachioed Joe DeValto in 14½ minutes with a lethal Cobra Clutch. The grip, which will produce sleep quicker than a Congressional debate, subdued DeValto to the extent that he had to be assisted from the ring.

Milo Steinborn and Michele Leone appeared in a 30-minute draw that was hilarious. Teamed with them was Referee Tiny Bouque, and the trio put on a skit that would have been a credit to "Hellzapoppin."

The groaners spent most of their time working on the arbiter to the vast amusement of all. Leone even booted him out of the enclosure, quite an engineering feat, considering Bouque's 310 pounds.

In the opener Henry Piers did everything but stab handsome John Melas before eliminating him with a series of body slams in 27 minutes. OSCAR ELDER.

Only Six Bears Killed By Hunters in Penna.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 25 (AP). Hunters killed only six bears in Pennsylvania during the State's four-day 1942 season, compared with nearly 600 during a season of the same length last year, the State Game Commission reported. Director Seth Gordon attributed the decrease to "warm weather and few hunters.

Coaches Pick 2 Each From V. M. I., Tech

By Barton Pattie
Associated Press Sports Writer

Richmond, Va., Nov. 25.—Garrard Ramsay, W. and M.'s great guard, and Joe Muha, one-man gang of the V. M. I. team, were the only unanimous choices of the Old Dominion coaches for the 1942 Associated Press all-State eleven—one of the most formidable in the history of the honor squad.

The wartime version of the mythical all-star squad listed a total of seven W. and M. Indians, largest number ever to make the squad from one school, and two each from V. M. I. and Virginia Tech. Three other Braves from the Williamsburg reservation were given second team berths.

The mentors were pretty well agreed on the outstanding players for most of the spots the only close battles developing for an end and a backfield position.

Won by Landslide

Glenn Knox, 190-pounder from Niota, Tenn., won one of the end spots by a landslide. Irvin Chasen, lanky Virginia Tech star from Richmond, nosed out Al Vandeweghe, polished W. & M. performer, for the other end position. The coaches voted Bob Moberg, Randolph-Macon ace from Hampton, as the State's fourth best end, and placed Billy Hill, Virginia captain, and Billy Clark, hard-playing V. M. I. end, as next in line for replacements on the All-State club.

Marvin Bass of Petersburg, captain of the potent W. & M. team, was the first choice for one of the tackle positions, and John Maskas, scrappy Virginia Techman, was named as Bass' running mate by a comfortable margin over two other fine tackles—Harold (Pappy) Fields, W. and M., who held an All-State tackle berth in 1941, and Ben Judy, another V. P. I. stalwart. Clyde Ellington, V. M. I., and Co-Captain Max Katz, Richmond, also received some support for tackle in the coaches' poll.

Julius Minton, V. M. I.'s stocky guard from Roanoke, won the position opposite Ramsey in a walkaway. The second team guards are Doc Holloway, W. and M., and Charlie Cooper, Virginia. Cooper also saw some service as a center this season.

Warrington Top Center

There was no question in the mind of the coaches that Tex Warrington, W. and M. of Dover, Del., was the State's best center, and that Steve Silianoff, Richmond, was the No. 2 snapper-back in the State. Only two other centers were written in on the ballots, and their vote was negligible.

Harvey Johnson, W. and M. backfield wheelhorse, was returned to the All-State ball carrying quartet for the third time by an avalanche of votes. Bob Longacre, W. and M.'s junior tailback and probably the State's most improved player this season, was given an honor spot by the heavy vote.

Nick Forkovitch, W. and M. blocker and former Augusta Military Academy athlete, came out on top of a 4-way scrap for the other berth in the All-State backfield. Forky was the only sophomore to earn a first team spot.

Howard Meets Lincoln Here Today at 2 P. M.

Colored Rivals Play for 37th Time Before Expected 10,000 Fans; Griffith Stadium Site

The Bisons of Howard University and the Lions of Lincoln will clash this afternoon at Griffith Stadium at 2 p. m. in the thirty-seventh renewal of the oldest of gridiron classics among colored collegiate institutions.

Despite the fact that both teams have had somewhat mediocre seasons fans who know the old-time rivalry between the institutions are expected to follow the fortunes of their favorites to the tune of 10,000 or upwards.

Coach Jim Rowland has the Bisons on edge for the fray. Bob Mitchell, the genuine triple-threat, together with Banks and Jackson, will spark the Bison attack. Champion, Pippin, Houze, Wesley and Atkins will be the mainstays of a line that has played outstanding defensive ball throughout the season.

The Lions have been showing smart improvements recently. While they lost, 42-0, to Morgan, and 13-6 to Wilberforce, they tied the undefeated Hampton aggregation, 13-all, and believe they are on the up-and-up. Manny Rivers, one-time famous Columbia blocking back, is their mentor.

The Lions have a light, but exceedingly fleet backfield, and will rely for their passing attack on Bob Cooper. The ball-carrying will be done principally by Capt. Bill Burnett, Bob Williams and "Chuggy" Chamberlain.

Eddie Goldberg's Thanksgiving gesture is a Red Cross doubles event for teams of men, women or mixed bowling. Entry fee has been set at $5 per couple with the Red Cross receiving 50c from each bowler, a buck in all. This year's average will be used on a 21-game basis and top average per twosome is 230. No handicap. The event will continue all day Thursday with the late hours preferred as most bowlers will have too much turkey in them to think about exercising in early afternoon. This event should draw a large number of bowlers as the popular Eddie Goldberg is guaranteeing first prize of $50 with others in proportion to entries. Better try it out.

Another Red Cross tourney is on the cards at the downtown Lafayette drives and Joe Pricci has been beating the drum for it these past two weeks. This one carries an $8 entry fee and is mixed doubles only. The 6-game block will be rolled at one time. A total of $1 per couple will be donated to the Red Cross and Joe, we understand, intends returning 5 cents per game as an additional reward to the always faithful A. R. C. Bowling starts at 2 in the afternoon and will be continuous. Among those already signed up are: Gladys Lynn-El Geib, Lil Copeland-Bert Lynn, Madge Lewis-Al Wright, Catherine Quigley-Joe DiMisa, Lorraine Gulli-Tony Santini, Inez Bryan-Bob Miciotto, Jessie Sacrey-Joe Pricci, Kitty Mulroe-Ray Watson, Lucy Rose-Billy Stalcup, Dot Carleton-Hal Sheppard, Virginia Wright-Al Cissel, Bing Moen-Johnny Burger, Caroline Hiser, Perce Wolfe-Lucile Young-Paul James, Mary Magnotto-Elmer Meade and Ruth McClintic-Nick Rinaldi. Other twosomes are signing up daily, Joe advises, and we look for this to be a whale of a big tourney and one certain to swell the coffers of the Red Cross. Here's another chance, duckpinners, to really do your bit and bowl, too!

Saturday another big event will take place, this time at Brookland Recreation where Doc Gartrell will stage the Bunker Hill Post American Legion handicap for the benefit of that group. Scratch is 125 on a two-thirds basis and three games will be bowled. Entry fee is $2 and first award of $75 is guaranteed. Bowlers may find action from 10 in the morning until midnight. One caution, though: no bowler with a 1941-42 average of over 125 may enter. Put this one on your Saturday list.

The listing of the three foregoing charity tournaments brings to mind that bowlers may say: "Heck, that's a lot of charity stuff. I'm giving to the Community Chest, buying bonds and stamps and Uncle Sam is hitting me heavy this year with taxes—that last Victory Tax thing was a real wallop!"

And we say: "So what!"

Listen, brother and sister: You being hurt in the pocketbook isn't half as bad as what Messrs. Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini can do if they're not stopped—but soon! We're thankful the war is turning around a bit so the United Nations can put in a punch or two and make 'em count. But we can't stop now. A bowler doesn't stop in the eighth box when he has about 160 or 175—he tries for that 200 game. That's what we've got to do; knock the three madmen out and don't give up until we chalk up a 200 game!

We've got to have to make sacrifices and more sacrifices. We're going to have to give and then give again and still some more. We can't stop now and "let George do it." We've got to pitch in and knock 'em out, we've got to show those who don't like democracy that WE LIKE IT AND MEAN TO KEEP IT!

You bowlers will see more war charity tournaments this year than you ever thought could be scheduled in one short season. The three dictators overseas aren't fooling—they mean business. Let's show them WE mean business too, and the way to do it is to enter every war charity bowling event possible.

Just remember it's better to buy bonds than to wear them!

Cardozo Wins Sectional Grid Crown, 12 to 0

On a muddy field, before a crowd of 2000, Cardozo High School grid warriors, led by the diminutive "Stump" Mason and the fleetfooted "Tony" Wallace, defeated Douglas High of Baltimore, for the colored South Atlantic championship yesterday at Griffith Stadium, 12-0.

Cardozo previously had won the city championship, defeating Dunbar, 33 to 0, and Armstrong, 7 to 0. The victory over Douglass was clean-cut, and largely a question of stamina, the two teams being evenly matched until within five minutes of the final gun.

Cardozo started its rush toward goal at that time with a pass, Wallace to Joe Brooks, good for 40 yards, placing the oval on the Douglass 40. Another pass, Wallace to Mason, was good for 11 yards. Then Wallace skirted right end to the Douglass 22, and Mason, on a delayed buck, went through the line for first down on the Douglass 15.

Wallace's next end run carried him down the sidelines to the Douglass 4, and Mason followed through the line first to the half-yard mark, and then for touchdown. Mason failed to convert, the pass from center being none too good.

Wallace laid the foundation for the second touchdown when he intercepted Taylor's long pass and ran back 40 yards to the Douglass 35. A series of line rushes placed the ball on the Douglass 6, and a penalty carried it to their 1-yard line, "Bus" Baylor carrying the pigskin over the goal line on the next play. The attempted conversion from placement was blocked.

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Nov. 25.—Terry Moore, captain and center fielder of the world champion Cardinals, is going to Panama to talk baseball and sell war bonds.

He was invited to visit American servicemen in the Canal Zone by the commanding officer after the Governor of Panama arranged for him to come and sell bonds.

Moore will take along two dozen baseballs, autographed by all the Cardinals, and 100 World Series souvenir scorecards.

Eagles Open Cage Season Saturday

American University's basketball team will open its heaviest basketball schedule in years Saturday night, entertaining the Baltimore Coast Guard five in the first of five pre-Christmas holiday games.

Coach G. Bernard Kalijarvi, successor to Staff Cassell as Eagle court mentor, announced a 21-game schedule, including three with service teams, 10 Mason-Dixon Conference clashes and 8 others with collegiate rivals outside the conference.

Georgetown, Catholic, Gallaudet and Wilson Teachers are the local encounters. Fourteen games will be played at home.

Kalijarvi has three regulars from last year's squad, which finished just short of the .500 mark in a tough schedule. George Zuras, Bart Fugler and Edwin Rabbitt are the returning yets, the first a Roosevelt High grad and the last two from Wilson.

Burke Hertz and Bob Fugler, Bart's younger brother, will probably round out an all District of Columbia starting team.

D. C. Lions Try For Initial Road Victory

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 25.—Washington's Lions will bid for their first road victory of the season tomorrow night when they test the fast-flying Pittsburgh Hornets in Duquesne Garden at 8:30 o'clock.

Immediately after tomorrow's Thanksgiving night match, the Lions will entrain for Washington, D. C., for their American Hockey League match with the Cleveland Barons at Uline Arena Saturday.

Pittsburgh, two-time conqueror of the Lions thus far this season, proved the first American Hockey League team to defeat the Western division leading Bisons on Buffalo (N. Y.) ice this season, turning the trick last Sunday night, 4 to 1.

Even so, the Hornets are no better than an even bet to defeat the Washingtonians, who have added many stars to their squad since losing an exciting 5-3 match to the Hornets with an undermanned squad here last October 28.

Frank Ceryance, a fine goalie, playing with the Lions on loan; Bob Gracie, a left-winger recently acquired in trade from Hershey for the veteran Peggy O'Neil, and Ossie Asmundsen, last season a corking center and winger with the Philadelphia Rockets, are numbered among Washington's key men.

Isbell Ties Sammy Baugh

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Cecil Isbell, the Green Bay passing expert, may beat out Washington's Sammy Baugh yet in their duel for passing honors in the National Football League.

Isbell, 1941 champion, fell behind last week, but today's figures showed he had bounced back and was tied with Baugh for the leadership. Isbell led in the number of completions (125 to Baugh's 118), but the situation was reversed in percentage of completions with Baugh leading with .573 and Isbell next with .551.

Isbell, however, still has two games to play and Baugh only one. Isbell also has the better of his rival in yards gained by passing (1711 to 1396) and in touchdown passes (20 to 14).

Don Hutson, Isbell's favorite receiver, last week ran his catches for the season to 71, 13 more than the record he held jointly with Don Looney of Pittsburgh.

Merlyn Condit of Brooklyn whittled away at Bill Dudley's lead in the ball-carrying race, but the Pittsburgh back still held a 52-yard advantage. Here are the leaders:

	Atts.	Yds.	Av.
Dudley, Pittsburgh	140	614	4.4
Condit, Brooklyn	104	558	5.4
Farkas, Washington	113	420	3.7

Tulane Meets LSU For 40th Time At Baton Rouge

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 2.—A time-honored rivalry of 40 years takes place on the turf of Tiger Stadium tomorrow when the football teams of Tulane and Louisiana State engage in a colorful Turkey Day battle.

Number 40 in a traditional series which began back in 1893 promises to be one of the most interesting with the satisfaction of beating his keenest enemy the victor's only prize. A crowd of almost 40,000 is expected.

With both teams out of championship and bowl pictures, the game is almost certainly to develop into a wide-open offensive show from the opening whistle, featuring Triple-Threat Stars Alvin Dark and Sulcer Harris of the Tigers against the Greenie Lou Thomas, Eddie Fischer and O. J. Key.

Navy Preflight Teams Banned From Bowls

By the Associated Press

Any bowl committees that had ideas of getting one of the Navy's Pre-Flight elevens for their New Year's Day football games can just forget all about it.

Navy Department officials announced yesterday that Pre-Flight teams had been forbidden to take part in any bowl games because of lack of transportation, the fact that such games would take the players away from their studies for more than 48 hours and because the players constantly are being called up for active duty.

The Cotton Bowl committee previously had announced the Georgia Pre-Flight eleven as its No. 1 selection for the January 1 game at Dallas. Iowa Pre-Flight officials, however, had said the Seahawks would not play any postseason games even if invited.

Several regular season games with the Pre-Flights teams also were canceled because of transportation difficulties. They included St. Mary's naval contest with Washington State and the Iowa Seahawks; the game between the Iowa and North Carolina Cadets and North Carolina's game with Colgate, scheduled for December 5 at Chapel Hill.

second place, although it's doubtful if he'll ever reach the top spot. Mike is still trailing the leading ground gainer, Rudolph (Little Doc) Mobley of Hardin-Simmons, by 280 yards.

Mobley Well in Lead

In eight games Mobley, already accredited with a record-smashing total offense figure for the season, has picked up 1173 yards on the ground. Holovak's spluge in recent weeks leaves him with a total of 893 yards rushing for the same number of games.

Holovak has, at least temporarily, blocked the efforts of the Hardin-Simmons duo of Mobley and Camp Wilson to finish one-two in individual rushing. Wilson dropped this week from fourth to fifth, with Bob Steuber of Missouri now third and Gene Fekete of Ohio State, fourth.

On the total offense front it's still all Frankie Sinkwich of Georgia, who last week wiped out the old record of 1928 yards set by Bud Schwenk of Washington University (St. Louis) in 1941. Sinkwich ran his string of yards to 1995, only five short of the coveted 2000-yard figure—once considered an unattainable high. He has one game yet to play.

15 Short of Record

Columbia's Paul Governali, the Nation's yardage leader via passing all fall, completed his season Saturday with a total of 1442 yards by aerials, just 15 shorts of the modern record of 1457 held jointly by Texas Christian's Davey Obrien and Schwenk. For the first time Governali was listed No. 1 in total completions, with 87 compared to 83 for Kansas' Ray Evans, who has led the pack all year.

The other leaders:

Total offense—After Sinkwich, Governali 168 rushing, 1442 yards passing, 1610 yards total; Dobbs, Tulsa, 362, 952, 1314; Dutton, Pittsburg, 675, 610, 1285; Graham, Northwestern, 246, 1012, 1258; Steube, 872, 356, 1228.

Rushing — After Mobley and Holovak, Steuber 872 yards in 10 games; Fekete, 865 in 9 games; Wilson, 861 in 8 games; Hirsch, Wisconsin, 767 in 10 games; Kennedy, Washington State, 741 in 8 games.

Passing (ranked on completions)—Governali, 87 passes for 1442 yards; Evans, 83 for 881; Gillette, Virginia, 82 for 920; Sinkwich, 79 for 1272; Graham, 79 for 1012; Mont, Maryland, 66 for 1076.

Punting (30 or more punts)—Cifers, Tennessee, 43.54-yard average; Faircloth, North Carolina State, 42.2; Strzykalski, Marquette, 41.9; Black, Mississippi State, 41.81; Douglas, Dartmouth, 41.42; Cooke, North Carolina, 41.33; Muha, Virginia Military, 41.

Pass receiving—Rogers, Texas A. and M., 35 caught for 412 yards; Judd, Tulsa, 27 for 373 yards; Ferguson, California, 26 for 338 yards; Miller, Southern Methodist, 25 for 409 yards; Hall, Texas Christian, 25 for 196 yards.

Schreiner Is Badgers Most Valuable Player

Madison, Wis., Nov. 25 (INS).—Dave Schreiner of Lancaster, Wis., was twice honored by his University of Wisconsin football teammates tonight.

Schreiner, an end prominently mentioned as a candidate for All-American honors, was chosen the Badgers' most valuable player during the '42 season, and with Halfback Mark Hoskins, also of Lancaster, was named co-captain of the '42 team.

Estelle Hoge's 328 High for Sandford's

The Maryland-District Ladies Bowling League was topped by Estelle Hoge, Sandford's, with a 116 single and 328 set which led her team to highs of 512 and 1,496 and three in a row from Fleishman's Yeast, last night. Another whitewash was scored by Gifford's Ice Cream in their sweep over Silver Beauty Salon.

and other prominent United States Government officials and church dignitaries.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will pontificate. The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will preside. The sermon will be delivered by the Most Rev. John F. O'Hare, military delegate.

Over the country the sounds of all-out production will continue to fill the air as America's workmen remain at their tasks, determined to work unceasingly until the day of victory.

Public school students here will begin their usual two-day Thanksgiving holiday but most Washington colleges will recess for today only. Employes of the District government will take today off and a curtailed program of postal services will afford holidays to some postoffice workers.

Only the main postoffice at North Capitol Street and Massachusetts Avenue; the Benjamin Franklin Station, Twelfth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, and the National Airport station, will follow a regular weekday schedule. All other stations will be closed. Delivery and pick-up service for Government agencies will go on as usual, but there will be no mail deliveries in the residential areas.

Much to Be Thankful For

Washington housewives will be able to prepare a meal with all the usual Thanksgiving flavor—turkey, cranberries and even pumpkin pie. The only item that may be missing will be coffee, sales of which were halted this week as a prelude to rationing.

Thanksgiving for servicemen in other parts of the world started at 8 a. m. yesterday—for others it will not start until 7:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Locally, more than 100 servicemen will partake of turkey in private homes through arrangements made by the OCD's home hospitality committee, which reported more entertainment offers from private citizens than could be filled.

The Norwegian Embassy will entertain about 30 at a reception to be held at 5:30 p. m.

The Soroptimist Club is sponsoring a Thanksgiving dinner at the Servicemen's Club, 306 Ninth Street Northwest, starting at 3 p. m.

A Thanksgiving supper for 350 homeless men follow special services at the Gospel Mission, Fifth and H Streets Northwest, at 7:45 p. m. The mission will also feed needy families.

USO Parties Planned

Most of Washington's USO clubs will hold old fashioned open house parties with traditional refreshments for servicemen and war workers, who are invited to drop in throughout the day and late into the night.

A freshly roasted, 60-pound pig, the donation of Mrs. Wilson Compton, will adorn the Dutch snack bar at the USO Penthouse Club in the Y. W. C. A.

Turkey, cranberries and all the trimmings will also be served at the 7 p. m. dinner hour, but informal dancing and games are planned from 3 p. m. until 11 p. m.

The USO club in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest, will hold open house all day with the swimming pool and game rooms open.

A buffet supper of cold turkey and trimmings will be served from 6 to 8 p. m. at the USO Club operated at 1814 N Street Northwest by the Women's Division of the National Catholic Community Service. Open house will be held there all day—from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m.

The Salvation Army's USO Club, 606 E Street Northwest, will be open all day and will serve refreshments.

The USO Lounge at the Central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest, will be open from 8 a. m. until midnight.

Mrs. Mildred Carr, USO director for Negro night and day war workers and servicemen has planned an old-fashioned Thanksgiving breakfast to be served at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., Ninth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, following a 10:30 to 11 a. m. worship service. The center will remain open until 1 a. m. Friday.

One thousand tickets for the Howard University-Lincoln University game can be obtained by Negro servicemen at the USO Club at Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., and the United States information booth at Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. After the game there will be an open house reception at the Twelfth Street Y.

D. C. Jail Celebration

Inmates of the District Jail will celebrate with a turkey dinner bought through their own earnings from canteen operations.

Even in the zones behind the battle lines in Africa and in the South Pacific, American soldiers and seamen will have the traditional turkey dinner with pumpkin pie. Only men actually fighting on Guadalcanal, New Guinea and Tunisia will have to go through the day on field rations.

At hundreds of Army and Navy bases at home, the boys in the services will eat tons of turkeys, pumpkins, cranberries and ice cream, while for the fighting men traveling and on lease, the USO will service Thanksgiving dinners in 1092 clubs in 523 cities and towns. In New York, the Stage Door Canteen and other organizations will have 15,000 soldiers and seamen as dinner guests at leading restaurants.

The United Seaman's Service will serve turkey dinner to 450 seamen from torpedoed merchant ships at its two rest homes at Gladstone, N. J., and Oyster Bay, Long Island, and to many other merchant seamen in various ports.

portant contributing factor to the streetcar death rate was the fact that the public does not realize that a streetcar traveling 20 miles an hour cannot stop within 50 feet.

The Coroner said his experience in streetcar accidents showed that the excuse of streetcar operators was that they sounded their gongs when they sighted someone about to cross the tracks, that the person would hesitate and finally dash across at the last moment.

Position of Platforms

MacDonald also charged that the PUC is encouraging jaywalking by its placing of streetcar platforms in the middle of blocks, rather than close to crosswalks at intersections. He also hit at the lack of uniformity in crosswalks, citing specifically the center grass plot crosswalks on Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. Army ambulances also were the object of an attack by Dr. MacDonald, who said they lacked regular ambulance sirens and added that two of them had figured in accidents recently.

PUC Chairman Flanagan said the commission would study Dr. MacDonald's crosswalk suggestions.

Motorman Duell testified that lack of public support of streetcar regulations was responsible for some accidents because passengers crowded at the front of the car, obscuring the operators' views to the side. Consensus was that steps would be necessary to enable policemen to persuade streetcar crowders to move back or get off "by moral suasion."

The officials decided to set up a central clearing house in the office of Wentworth, for information to police officers.

Traffic officers and D. C. officials were puzzled by the fact that although traffic deaths have increased for the year, traffic accidents and injuries showed a marked months of 1941 injuries totaled decrease. During the first 10 3910 and 3669 were tallied during the same period of 1942. There were 12,836 accidents of all sorts in the first 10 months of 1941, only 9846 in the like period of 1942, a decrease of 20 per cent.

Capital Transit Co. President Merrill came to the meeting with six suggestions. They are:

1. That a campaign be instituted to educate pedestrians in the use of crosswalks.
2. That intoxication is an important contributing factor to accidents and that the public be educated to the danger of using the streets or operating motor vehicles after drinking.
3. That double parking and parking on narrow streets be eliminated by strict enforcement of existing laws and that laws be made to further decrease the hazard.
4. That draft boards extend long deferments to experienced operators of streetcars and buses until new operators can be trained to take their places.
5. The Capital Transit Co. already has begun its own step-up of education of streetcar and bus operators.
6. That motion pictures be made and distributed to educate the public on the necessity for moving to the rear in buses and streetcars.

2 Men, 2 Boys Hurt In Traffic Accidents

Two men and a 13-year-old newsboy suffered broken bones in traffic accidents here yesterday.

Most seriously injured was Thomas M. Irving, 64, of 2605 Adams Mill Road Northwest, who was struck by an automobile at Adams Mill Road and Lanier Place Northwest.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital by William Clayton, jr., 28, 3625 Sixteenth Street Northwest, driver of the car which hit him. Doctors said he suffered a possible skull fracture.

Shirley A. Bigsby, 6, Negro, 934 Hughes Street Northwest, was taken to Gallinger Hospital last night suffering from head injuries as the result of having been struck by a Capital Transit Co. streetcar as she crossed Pennsylvania Avenue at Twenty Fifth Street Northwest.

The streetcar was operated by Walter Callahan, 28, 1114 Twenty Fifth Street Northwest, who has five months experience as a streetcar operator, according to police.

Joseph Reeder, Negro, 13, of 213 N Street Southwest, had his left leg broken when his paper wagon was struck by a car in the 1000 block Fourth Street Southwest. He was admitted to Providence Hospital.

Soviet Pincers Closing On Nazis at Stalingrad

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TAKE RIVER JUNCTION IN ENCIRCLING MOVE—Russian troops occupied Novomaximovsky and Staromaximovsky at the junction of the Don and Chir rivers, a special Soviet communique said last night without indicating whether the Red army (1-dotted) north of Stalingrad swept down or the army from the south 2-dotted) swept up in a move to trap 300,000-man Nazi assault army. Other Russian columns (3) northeast of the city drove through Zimovsky, Blizhny-Perekopa and Trekh Ostrovyanskaya and reinforced the Stalingrad garrison to capture Akatovka. Shaded area indicates Russian territory apparently still held by Nazis

"temporarily broken" Nazi lines in that area.)

Inside Stalingrad, the regular midnight communique reported, Russian troops had cleared the Germans from several gun emplacements and strong points, killing 300 Nazis in one sector and putting out of action some enemy artillery and mortar batteries.

The Stalingrad garrison now is fighting with the aid of a Russian column that was reported yesterday to have driven southward along the Volga to join Soviet units in the northern factory district.

The regular war bulletin acknowledged that the Russians were meeting heavy resistance from Germans operating from field fortifications northwest of Stalingrad and said the enemy also was counterattacking in some sectors.

But the Russians said their shock troops were repulsing these fierce charges, and that Soviet attack planes had shot down 9 Nazi fighters and 15 Junkers-52 transport planes. This reference to transport planes indicated a hurried German effort to bolster their troops with aerial reinforcements.

The Red army fighting defensively in the Nalchik and Tuapse sectors of the Caucasus were also said to be holding firmly.

The powerful Russian effort to bag the entire Nazi army stalemated inside and outside Stalingrad appeared to be confined almost entirely to the Don River bend during yesterday's operations. The situation as it was summed up last night before issuance of the special communique was:

A tremendous battle was in progress some 50 miles west of Stalingrad between Kalach and Trekhostrovskaya—both recaptured by the Russians along the ice-clogged Don.

Russian drives both north and south of the path of death continued to roll forward over the bodies of Germans, Italians, Rumanians and even Finns.

"The snowy spaces of the Don Steppes are covered with thousands of bodies of Germans and Rumanians," Pravda said and published photographs depicting such scenes. "Lines of captives proceed to the north. Ragged, starving and frozen soldiers are stumbling to quarters, often without guards."

The offensive to the northwest carried 85 miles into German defenses-in-depth. To the southwest along the Stalingrad-north Caucasus railway, the Russians had plunged 65 miles and were nearing the junction of Kotelnikovski. Within the great Don bend, several Russian columns were menacing the main Moscow-Rostov railway.

Nelson Picks Wilson To Be Output Czar

ture, will give Wilson power over tanks, guns, ships, and other war material in addition to aircraft. Nelson plans to put it into effect whether the military gives it a blessing or not, on the assumption that the President granted him broad enough powers to make the delegation by himself.

At the same time, Nelson has decided to revoke sections of a directive of last March authorizing the Army and Navy to direct production scheduling and perform other production functions. Whether Nelson would also remove the related production functions as well and give them to Wilson could not be learned last night.

Wilson, a former president of General Electric Co., is regarded by WPB officials as the main line of defense against military encroachment on functions which have traditionally been in civilian hands.

Control over scheduling is particularly vital because it determines the amount of military items made within any unit of time. If scheduling is effective, finished munitions flow of the country's war plants in an orderly rate, with all items in balance with respect to the country's program.

Faulty scheduling was one of the factors behind the threat of shutdowns and slowdowns of war plants which plagued WPB early last summer. Then, although the problem of scheduling was in the hands of the armed forces, the War Production Board received most of the blame because the scheduling problem was complicated by imperfect materials distribution which was in civilian hands.

Since then control over materials flow has been reorganized by WPB Vice Chairman Ferdinand Eberstadt, former head of the Army-Navy Munitions Board. Eberstadt placed greater responsibility over materials in the hands of the armed forces and then took steps to line up materials supply with demand by instituting the controlled materials plan.

Observers pointed out that under the controlled materials plan Nelson was left little more than supervisory authority over materials distribution.

Restoration of control over production schedules would give Nelson a real voice in production planning once again and possibly shift the balance of power in WPB from Eberstadt to Wilson.

Meanwhile, Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri and of the Special Senate Defense Investigating Committee yesterday indorsed the proposal in Congress to centralize control of all materials and civilian manpower in a new Office of War Mobilization.

Before a Senate Labor Subcommittee which is considering the war mobilization bill, Truman declared battle strategy should be left to the military and production entrusted to a centralized civilian authority.

Truman said he was "highly impressed by the bill's proposal to create a stronger War Production Board with an executive at the head who is responsible to the President for production and supply."

Identical bills to effectuate that purpose have been introduced by Tolan in the House and by Senators Pepper (Democrat) of Florida and Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia in the Senate.

Representative Tolan (Democrat) of California, also supporting the bill, said he thought the time had come to review the entire war effort on the home front.

"Piecemeal reorganizations at this time are no substitute for a comprehensive organization which takes into account all the related elements of war production," he asserted.

roads from Algeria.

The main battle has not been joined. It is expected to be tough and bloody because the Germans are strongly entrenched in stout fortifications laborously built over the years by the French.

German broadcasts said their Tunisian troops had been reinforced by armored formations, mechanized detachments and artillery and that their hold on the coastal and inland highways had been strengthened. Bombing attacks were said to have slowed the movement of British and Americans from Algeria. British tank spearheads were reported ambushed and mauled on the Algerian frontier.

The Morocco radio said German planes from Tunisia and Sicily bombed Bone, in Algeria, twice last night and attacked advancing Allied columns.

The British Eighth Army advancing southwest of Agedabia was reported by Reuters to be near El Agheila, and the next day or so should disclose whether Rommel has had time to organize defense there.

There has been ample evidence that the Germans and Italians were reinforcing Tunisia, but there have been no such reports of help for Marshal Erwin Rommel's weary legions. This may be due to the difficulty in moving supplies 400 miles from Tripoli.

One indication of the lengths to which Hitler was going to hold a bridgehead in Africa was the report of John Jarvie, Australian correspondent, who cabled from Algiers that Axis planes raiding Allied positions were fighting at Stalingrad three weeks ago.

The Communique

The text of the War Department communique, issued in Washington, follows:

"North Africa.

"1. Aircraft of the Royal Air Force and the United States Army Air Force have carried out extensive and successful operations against the enemy in Tunisia.

"2. Royal Air Force bombers attacked the airfield at Bizerte on Monday night. One large explosion and more than 30 small ones were observed during the raid.

"3. Royal Air Force bombers returned to Bizerte last night and concentrated on the docks and the shipping in the harbor. Numerous bomb flashes were seen and there was a big sheet of flame which appeared to come from exploding gasoline. All bombers returned safely.

"4. United States Army P-38 fighters of the Fourteenth Air Force destroyed 14 enemy planes in Tunisia yesterday. These included seven Italian troops transport planes which were shot down at Gabes and two Junkers-88 planes destroyed elsewhere in southern Tunisia. Four transport planes, one seaplane and one tank were destroyed on the airfield at Gabes. All our planes returned safely, although four of our planes were damaged and one pilot was wounded.

"5. The British First Army is making satisfactory progress in operations against the enemy in eastern forward areas."

fight and kept faith—hail and farewell.

"We'll carry on the fight. We'll show them that everyone of you is a better man than that little yellow monkey, and we'll make him wish he'd died before he was born."

Pausing to look at the sparklingly white-dressed and khaki-clad Marines and officers, all veterans, he added: "You are living proof we can whip them. Against great odd you defeated the enemy."

Turning his attention to the youths, many less than 19, he said. "My advice to you boys when you return to port is: Be good and you'll be happy."

After the ceremony I asked the men what they thought of when Halsey was speaking and pinning on the medals. This is what they said:

Dr. Edward S. Lowe, 36 (lieutenant commander) of Costa Mesa, Calif., who received the Navy Cross, said: "I though of the Marines, many mortally wounded as they were saying, 'Thank you, Doctor.' I thought of men who asked that others be helped first. Of my Marine First Sergeant Lee (Benjamin G.) Lee, who received the Silver Star," Lee was badly wounded and tied up with splints, but asked that men be brought to him so that he could carry on with his work as a Medical Corps worker.

Lieut. Comdr. William W. Wilbourne, 34, Marion, Ala., gunnery officer, received the Navy Cross and a citation which read: "He controlled the fire of his offensive weapons in such a rigorous and determined manner that a Japanese battleship was silenced and set afire, a Japanese cruiser was sunk and a destroyer was sunk."

"I thought of Dr. Lowe, who stayed at work 60 hours—he and every mother's son aboard fought magnificently," Commander Wilbourne said. "There is not a boy in the crew. They are all men.

"And I thought of Carpenter Isbell (Harold A. Isbell, Long Beach, Calif.). He was badly hit in the neck. His jugular vein was cut and he held the vein with his right hand and uncoiled the hose and got the pressure on and helped extinguish one of the fires. He's in the hospital."

Isbell got the Navy Cross.

Ensign Robert A. Dusch, 35, Alliance, Ohio, added; "Isbell also voluntarily steered the ship when she was out of control after the officers were killed."

Lieut. (J. G.) Nathaniel Coleman, 23, U. S. N. R., New Ferry, Va., who received a Silver Star, recalled, "I thought of the moment when the Jap ships first illuminated us from three directions, but we shot before the Japs did."

The turret officer of Coleman's guns fired as long as he could and then helped fight fires and take care of the wounded. "I also thought of the sensation when the pointer told me we were shooting at a Jap battleship and I couldn't believe it—and then a hit set off our alarm howler and the screeching was terrific during the remainder of the 25-minute battle."

Lieut. (J. G.) Richard W. Tucker of Berwyn, Ill., who carried out his duty as the sky control aft and transferred during the battle to the port battery, said, "While seeing other men get decorated I thought of the small group on one gun; one man got shrapnel in his guts but kept on ramming his gun.

"I could see through him. He got the Navy Cross posthumously.

"And I thought of Poulter (Fred Poulter), gunners' mate, second class, Frost, Tex., who collected the crew under fire and organized it."

W. H. Dawson of Billings, Mont., who received the Silver Star, "thought of a man, with one arm useless, kept carrying heavy ammunition, hugging it to his belly."

organization of WMC was first discussed. However, it was not known whether the labor chiefs would view with pleasure appointment of Ickes to the key labor spot in view of his lack of background and experience in labor matters.

On factor lending weight to the report is the known reluctance of the President to dismiss officials he would like to remove. The reported shift would have the effect of getting all three officials out of posts where they have been under fire without getting rid of them.

Senate Must Be Given Voice In Drafting Peace, Wiley Says

By Arthur Hachten

International News Service Staff Writer

Senator Alexander Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, yesterday demanded that the President seek the advice of the Senate in drafting the peace treaty to follow the present war.

In urging adoption of his resolution to establish an advisory council to be consulted by the President in negotiating peace terms after the war has been won, Wiley cited the requirement in the Constitution that treaties shall be made with the "advice and consent of the Senate."

"In the past," he told the Senate, "we have seen instance after instance where the executive has neglected the simple implications of the word 'advice.'

"The most flagrant instance was that of President Wilson, when he went to Europe and personally and exclusively, without any advice of the Senate, undertook to write a peace treaty."

As Wiley spoke a battle was brewing behind the scenes in the Senate over a pending bill to have the United States award to Panama property in the Canal Zone held by the United States and valued at upward of 17 million dollars as a goodwill gesture.

The properties involved include water and sewage systems installed by the United States in the cities of Panama and Colon as well as real estate in Panama and Colon owned by the Panama Railroad Co. Under the bill the United States would also reimburse the Republic of Panama up to $2,700,000 for its expenditures on the Chorrera-Rio Hato Highway.

Senators Hiram Johnson of California, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, a member of that committee, served notice they will oppose passage of the bill.

They contended that the transaction with Panama should be handled by treaty. A two-thirds majority of the Senate is required to ratify a treaty, whereas a bill needs only approval of a majority for passage.

Senators voiced the opinion that when the Panama bill is considered in the Senate within a few days there will be a general expression of views on procedure for drafting the peace terms when that time comes in the present war.

Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont characterized Wiley's speech as being "very timely." The Vermont Senator said that some arrangement should be made for the President to obtain the "advice" of the Senate, as provided in the Constitution, before the peace treaty is presented to the Senate for definite action.

Opposition to Gas Rationing Mounts

The following developments, meantime, gave evidence that Senate and House opposition will grow more bitter as the December 1 deadline for gas rationing approaches and that the struggles will involve also recent Administration moves in the field of fuel oil rationing and the handling of the critical East Coast oil shortage:

1. Six Western Senators got behind a resolution calling specifically for a Senate investigation of a threatened "mid-continent" fuel shortage, but intended by its author, Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, to embrace the "whole fuel oil, gasoline and coal situation."

2. As a result of general apprehension of New England legislators over heating oil shortages, Representative Martin (Republican) of Massachusetts, House minority leader, summoned members to a meeting Tuesday to consider a program for "preventing people from freezing to death."

3. In the hope that a thorough airing of all problems relating to gasoline rationing would tend to mollify widespread objection to the program, Chairman Truman of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee summoned William M. Jeffers, rubber director; Leon Henderson, price administrator; Interior Secretary Ickes, who also is petroleum coordinator, and Eastman for a hearing tomorrow.

It was apparent last night that a concerted congressional move is under way to force postponement of Nation-wide rationing, with the possibility that the antirationing bloc might get back of legislation calling for a delay to be used as a weapon which might be effectively exercised in view of a growing inclination at the Capitol to apply brakes to the President's wartime powers. It was possible that the congressional protest might be made directly to Mr. Roosevelt.

"Bug That Beat Hitler"

From Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas the Interstate Commerce Subcommittee heard the charge that "this idea of having somebody from Washington telling an individual how to go about his own business looks too much like the bug that bit Hitler."

"Just because a fellow comes from Washington," Sumners declared, "doesn't indicate he has any more sense or patriotism. We're not going to conserve democracy by turning an individual responsibility (to save rubber) over to a bureaucracy."

Senator Clark presented his resolution for an investigation of the fuel and gasoline situations on behalf of himself and Senators Truman of Missouri, Thomas of Oklahoma, Connally of Texas, and Gillette of Iowa (Democrats), and Reed and Capper, Kansas Republicans.

American Mission To Aid in African Rehabilitation

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A powerful American mission, composed of Lend-Lease, Treasury, State Department and Board of Economic Warfare experts, is being organized to be sent to French West and North Africa to assist in the rehabilitation of the monetary, agricultural and fiscal affairs of these territories newly coming under American and British occupation, it was learned today.

The agricultural and mineral wealth of these territories will be put to the best possible use by the American mission in cooperation with the French authorities, it was asserted. After meeting food requirements of the population and the American and British armies, the surplus will probably be shipped to Great Britain, thereby easing the drain on the United States under Lend-Lease and at the same time saving shipping and time.

Tunisia, Algeria, Morocco and French West Africa are wealthy in such foodstuffs as peanuts, dried fruit, canned fish, wines, olive oil, barley, wheat and corn.

of the air battle against the enemy ships:

Enemy naval forces under cover of darkness again attempted to land reinforcements to the beleaguered garrison but were shattered and repulsed and the attempt was unsuccessful.

"A light cruised and four destroyers made the sortie. Our heavy and medium bombers intercepted with flares and 500-pound bombs in Huon Gulf and sank two destroyers with direct hits and severely damaged a third.

"This latter was dead in the water for 25 minutes and then was seen heading for land at a speed of six knots. It is probable she also sank, as our rear air echelons searched her possible area of position without seeing her.

"The ships were apparently heavily loaded with troops and those on the destroyed units undoubtedly were lost.

"The light cruised and the remaining destroyer fled to the North."

B. & L. Assets Set New Peak Of 178 Million

Combined resources of Washington building and loan associations reached a new all-time peak of $178,505,909 as of October 31, representing an increase of $8,847,161 over the same date last year.

This was revealed yesterday in a comparative balance sheet compiled by F. Willson Camp, secretary of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League. Assets of members increased $958,127 in October as compared with the previous month and Mr. Camp said that new savings share accounts during the month averaged 25 daily.

Total share money to the credit of members rose during the year from $147,299,951 to $156,835,791 or a gain of $9,535,840. Surplus and reserves also reflected a healthy increase, growing from $13,088,729 in 1941 to $15,263,240 today.

A decline in mortgage loan activity was disclosed, however, as last year advances of $4,706,929 were approved while in October loans declined to $3,368,809 or a loss of $1,388,120.

A brisk demand from customers for war bonds and other war securities was note, the report concluded.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Fund Drive Outlined

The American Bankers Association yesterday outlined to its membership of 14,000 banks plans for their participation in the Treasury's nine-billion-dollar Victory Fund war financing drive in December.

The bank members of the organization have been sent a booklet describing how volunteer workers and bankers could best make the campaign a huge success.

Federal Reserve District key bankers have been enrolled in Victory Fund committees and in subcommittees in all States and most counties and municipalities. About 45,000 volunteer workers—largely from banks—will assist in the drive.

The volunteers will seek out individual investors, municipal and county fund officials, endowed educational, social and religious institutions, fraternal organizations and large and small corporation bank depositors.

50 Million Purchasers

The Treasury announced yesterday that more than 50 million Americans have purchased war saving bonds—setting a record for participation in war financing—and that most of the purchases were made by small wage earners.

"More than 112 million Series E bonds are now in the hands of the American people," the department said. "Of the number, 90 million are in the $25 and $50 denominations."

More than 22 million workers are buying bonds under the payroll savings plan, the announcement said.

Controllers Hear Williams

Dr. Maynard O. Williams, chief of the foreign staff of the National Geographic Society, addressed members of the District of Columbia chapter of the Controllers' Institute of America at a dinner meeting Tuesday night in the Carlton Hotel. His subject was "Let's Look Abroad."

North Africa, he asserted, is now a testing ground of the American way of life, contrasted with Nazi tyranny and callous disregard for the rights and feelings of populations. This African area, he added is now turning to us in trustful cooperation.

Boon for the Future

If you've had cans of food get wet and lose their labels, and you couldn't figure out what was inside without opening the can, take heart for the post-war future.

Because military operations often involve handling of tins in wet weather and at sea, the War Production Board is asking food canners to stamp on the cans the name or an abbreviation of the food inside.

Once the practice is established, maybe it'll carry over into peacetime.

Then if you see a labelless can marked "Apbut" you'll know it contains apple butter; "Pinap" will mean pineapple; "Tomju" will be tomato juice, and so on.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

An Open Letter To the Senate

Dear Senator:

What if Uncle Sam kept your salary down to $10,000 a year and paid other members from $11,000 to $14,000? I know you work more than 40 hours a week. Most of us do. But what if the Senator whose office is next door is paid overtime and the same benefit was denied you? And what if you were compelled to work as long or longer hours than your colleague next door? It would be worse, wouldn't it, if your salary was barely enough to feed and clothe yourself and your family? And finally, what if you had an opportunity to represent another State and be paid for your overtime work, wouldn't you be inclined to switch jobs?

You may think I'm asking a lot of "iffy" questions . . . that it couldn't happen here. It's true that it isn't happening to you personally, Mr. Senator, but these exact injustices and inequalities are widespread among that group of Americans that you're directly responsible for—the 2,600,000 civilian employes in the Federal service. And you can do something about it. You wouldn't be getting a square deal if the Senator next door was paid a higher salary. The country would back you in your fight for justice. Do you think the Federal employes, particularly those in Washington, are being treated fairly?

This is to remind you, Mr. Senator, that more than 60 per cent of the Federal employes are paid overtime. They're paid overtime because you authorized it. But you have forgotten the other 40 per cent. Do you realize the effect of your legislation? Just to refresh your mind I'm going to cite a few examples: professional and technical employes at the Navy Department—some 3500 of them—are paid overtime for the eight additional hours they must work each week. But the low-paid clerical employes who work in the same offices must work the same number of hours without the overtime benefit.

Clerical employes at the Washington Navy Yard are paid overtime. The clerks and stenographers at headquarters—just a few blocks removed—are denied the additional pay. The War Department and all other Federal agencies here are at a distinct disadvantage in recruiting professional and technical employes. Only the Navy can pay overtime despite the fact that all the employes must work over 40 hours. Civilian employes in the District Office of the Engineers Corps get overtime pay. In the headquarters office the employes don't get it. The War Department can only pay its "field" employes here overtime and very often the employes in offices next door are in the departmental service and they can get it.

It would appear to the most casual observer, Mr. Senator, that you have a prejudice against the employes working here. If you haven't, how can this condition be explained: The Navy has more than half a million civilian workers and the department with your approval, pays overtime to just about every single one of these employes outside the District. The only substantial number of employes who are discriminated against work here. You have applied the same condition to the War Department. The largest bloc of its employes who aren't paid overtime are right here in the District.

Now you've been here for some time, Mr. Senator, and need I remind you that the costliest city in the country in which to live is Washington, D. C. Ask your wife, she'll tell you, if she hasn't already. But for the facts I refer you to a statement issued a few days ago by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Washington tops them all. To maintain a family of four here on a minimum level costs $1731.88 a year. In Mobile the cost is $1433.72 and in Houston it's $1511.88. But War and Navy employes in Mobile and Houston get paid overtime. It's a ridiculous situation, don't you agree?

The injustices and inequalities in Federal pay scales is something that can't be defended, especially by a Senator who's pledged to treat us all fairly and squarely. This letter is a reminder that the Administration's uniform overtime pay bill will be called up in the Senate next Monday. This bill would cure many of the evils that I pointed out above. It would treat all Federal workers alike. Remember, Mr. Senator, that turnover among Federal workers is running at the enormous rate of 82.5 per cent. On January 1, they'll have another 5 per cent deducted from their checks—Victory Tax. The cost of living has gone up 20 per cent here but base employes salaries have remained unchanged. We're depending on you, Senator.

Sincerely yours,
JERRY KLUTTZ.

Emergency Radio System To Be Set Up

The District of Columbia area will develop a wartime emergency radio service to supplement telephone communications of the Office of Civilian Defense communications control system, Herbert A. Friede, communications controller, revealed yesterday.

With the work to be performed by volunteer amateur radio operators, Friede appealed to the public to donate all unused or junked radio receiving sets to be used as a reservoir for parts to be used for building two-way radios which will be used in the system.

Part of National Plan

The plan is a part of a national program approved by the Federal Communications Commission, which has assigned secret frequencies to hundreds of amateur operators under the special supplemental system under War Emergency Radio Service regulations.

The broader coverage by the two-way radio sets is planned to cover any contingency that might arise in the bombing dislocation of telephone facilities.

Friede said his organization planned to build enough two-way sets through a volunteer system to carry the entire load of communications in the event of an attack. The volunteers will receive parts from District of Columbia firehouses, which will be clearing houses for the old and junked sets. Donors are requested to bring old sets to the fire stations.

Bailey Named Aide

D. C. Commission President Young, civilian defense coordinator for the area, appointed George W. Bailey, president of the Radio Relay League, an organization of 50,000 radio "hams," or amateurs, as radio aide for the system. Miss Elizabeth Zandonini, of the Bureau of Standards, was appointed deputy aide.

Local radio "hams" to be enlisted in the communications system will begin at a meeting of the Washington Radio Club at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 p. m. Saturday.

Advanced First Aid Class to Open Dec. 2

An advanced class in first aid will open December 2 at the Central High School under the direction of the Red Cross. The classes will be held through December 11 from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. Nelson E. Perin will be the instructor.

Victory Sidelights

First Aid Unit Is Organized By War College Personnel

The first volunteer first aid detachment ever organized at a military post has been set up at the Army War College and will receive its charter from the Red Cross tomorrow at 11 a.m. in exercises at the college's guest and reception center.

The detachment is composed of officers' wives and several enlisted men, all of whom volunteered their time to take first aid training as a preliminary to organization of the unit. It will augment the professional facilities of the post and stand ready for service in emergency.

The charter will be presented by J. W. Gates, Red Cross director of instruction for first aid, water safety and accident prevention, and will be accepted by Col. Thomas F. Bresnahan, War College Commandant, on behalf of charter members. They are:

Rust Added to List Of Rally Speakers

Addition of H. L. Rust, chairman of the D. C. War Savings Committee, to the roster of speakers on the "Women at War Week" rally program tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce Building was announced yesterday.

Principal speaker will be Mrs. Charles C. Gates of Denver, Colo., who was in Honolulu during the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Also on the program are the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps and community singing led by Rock Kirkham, assistant Scout executive of the National Capitol Area Council of Boy Scouts.

185 Emergency Billets To Be Designated

One hundred and eighty-five emergency food and housing billet posts in Washington will be marked with a special insignia consisting of a red cup and white triangle, on a black background inclosed in a blue-bordered circle. The public is asked to look for them and remember the locations.

While the billet posts have been established to supply food and shelter to those made homeless in an air raid, they also are to be used as registration centers for residents.

To this end it has been asked that persons keep their nearest billet post acquainted with any change of address.

The registration is designed to aid in tracing families after an air raid.

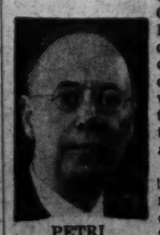
National Symphony Performs as If Inspired Under Masterful Direction of Hans Kindler

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Egon Petri. Program: Overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila" (Glinka), Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major (Brahms), Symphony No. 2 in D major Sibelius).

By Ray C. B. Brown

Between musicians and auditors there was a stimulating rapport last evening at the second Wednesday concert of the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall. It was one of those happy occasions when everything goes well from start to finish—when the conductor is at the peak of persuasiveness, the soloist in the most communicative mood and the orchestra players responsive to the last degree. If one were looking for a material circumstance to account for the spiritual glow, it might be that the meeting of those two compatriots, Hans Kindler and Egon Petri, struck the spark of inspiration.



PETRI

Conductor and soloist certainly seemed to be of one mind in the admirable reading of Brahms' second piano concerto—a reading that had breadth, depth and thickness. Nothing was scamped or lightly passed over, nothing was phrased carelessly or unduly emphasized in the eloquent projection of the great work. The poesy and the power, the beauty and the beatitude of the music were disclosed in a continuous flow of urgent feeling. No listener could have remained unmoved by the interpretative spirit that animated the performance.

In its unusually large dimensions as well as in its remarkable effect of spontaneity throughout a long form, this concerto is Brahms' masterpiece for the piano. The instrument is so welded with the orchestral choir as to be but one voice in the ensemble. The mood of the music is wholesome and confident in a happy blending of romantic fervor and intellectual communication. These qualities were brought out by Mr. Petri whose technical mastery of the keyboard is a medium for artistic integrity. His auditors gave him an awarding acclaim that recalled him thrice to the stage.

Dr. Kindler did not relax his intensity during the intermission and his reading of the second symphony of Sibelius was ardent and stirring. The orchestra caught his fire and played with utter conviction this music so suffused with the atmosphere of Finnish forests and lakes, so evocative of an olden time of myth and saga.

Marine Band Concert

Overture to "Der Freischutz," (Weber), Passacaglia in C Minor, (Bach), "Natchez-On-the-Hill" (John Powell), "Hungarian Rhapsody" (Popper), "Nuages" and "Fetes" (Debussy), "Invitation to the Dance" (Weber-Weingartner), "Capriccio Espagnol" (Rimski-Korsakov).

Marking its second weekly program of the season, the Marine Band Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Capt. William F. Santelmann, played last night to a near-capacity audience.

Highlight of the evening was the playing of the Hungarian Rhapsody for violincello and orchestra by David Popper, in which John Auer was the soloist. Mr. Auer responded to the warm reception of the audience by playing as an encore Fritz Mueller's "Andante Cantabile." Mr. Mueller, a resident of Washington, was at one time first cellist of the Marine Band and played with the organization for 30 years. His composition, still in manuscript, was played with sincerity and sympathy.

The spirit and unison of the orchestra was heard at its best in John Powell's lively and truly American "Natchez on the Hill." Here and in "Thanksgiving Hymn," chosen fittingly as an encore, perhaps the best playing of the evening was done.

7 Stations To Get No Gas For 4 Months

WPB Announces Penalty Against Homes Oil Co. for Exceeding Quotas

For exceeding their delivery quotas in April, May and June, seven filling stations here yesterday were cut off from all motor fuel deliveries for four months.

The War Production Board announced the penalty against the Homes Oil Co. operated by Jacob and Matilda Homes.

"That puts us out of business," said Mrs. Homes, who declared she and her husband were hazy about the rules and did not intend to commit any violation. Mrs. Homes said she did not yet know what would be done with a large supply of gasoline the company has in storage, which the WLB order prevents being delivered to the filling stations for retail disposal.

A WLB spokesman said that a hearing brought out that the Homes Co., in three months, delivered its stations 220,000 gallons of gasoline in excess of its quota. This was more than twice as much as the stations were entitled to, the spokesman said.

The company has 30 employes in the stations and its office.

Other WPB announcements yesterday urged motorists to indorse their gas ration cards with their signatures and addresses and credited "skip-stop" bus line schedules with a 16-per cent saving in gasoline and tires without hurting service.

Scrap Needs Still Great As Drives End

Scrap material drives in Washington are finished as such, Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District Salvage Committee, said yesterday.

He emphasized, however, that this did not mean that citizens should relax their efforts to get out their scrap.

The collection of any available scrap material will be continued, much as the District makes daily collections of trash and garbage.

112 Pounds Per Person

At the same time Walker announced that Washington collections between January 1 and November 1 amounted to 112 pounds of scrap metal per person.

"While I have not the figures from other cities before me," he said, "I am confident that Washington is somewhere up near the top among the Nation's cities.

"And I want to emphasize that our figures are not estimates, but actual ones compiled from actual collections."

Continuous Effort

Walker explained that he planned to maintain a continuous effort to collect scrap material but would not sanction another drive.

He further explained that the flow of scrap into the District pile was decreasing and would continue to decrease until it reached a level commensurate with the ordinary everyday discarding of worn or broken scrap material.

73,678,423 Pounds

His figures revealed that collections in the January-November period totaled 73,678,423 pounds. He used this and a population figure in the District of 663,000 in getting his per capita figure.

At the same time he said the District had collected in salvage material, including rags, paper, rubber and others, a total of 157,738,341 pounds.

In the meantime the tin can collection was implemented by the establishment of 25 can collection depots among the 75 buildings at the apartment development of Greenway.

The plan was adopted and executed by the Greenway Citizens Association with Evelyn Williamson as chairman of the salvage committee. Assisting her were Sidney Binder, E. Cynamon, Ruth Haken, Sylvia Littman and Leo Sherman.

Stofberg Is Made Assistant To District Commissioners

SWORN IN—Charles Stofberg (left) takes the oath of office as assistant to Commissioner Young from Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners

Charles Stofberg, former Post reporter, was sworn in yesterday as special assistant to the District Commissioners. He replaces Frank Holmes, who resigned to seek entrance into the Coast Guard.

Stofberg, who covered the District Building for The Post for five years, gave up a position as public relations director of the D. C. Rent Control Administration to take the liaison post with the District government.

Commissioner John Russell Young welcomed Stofberg to the District fold, saying that his appointment was "an extremely happy selection."

Stofberg, 30, is married and has two children. He holds an A.B. degree from George Washington University and is working for a master's degree. He was appointed to the rent control office in January. Previously, concurrently with his Post position, he was a member of the D. C. Petroleum Conservation Commission.

Major Cogswell Back in Army; Four Times Decorated in 1918

OFF TO ANOTHER WAR—Theodore F. Cogswell (left), chief register of wills, has been commissioned a major in the Army Transport Service and is leaving his duties to Victor Mersch, who has been nominated for the job. It is the second time in 30 years that Cogswell has left the Register of Wills Office to join the Army. He served in World War I

For the second time in his 30 years with the District Registry of Wills, Maj. Theodore F. Cogswell, commissioned several days ago in the Army Transportation Service, last night left his staid offices in the District Court Buildings to enter active military duty.

His registration as chief register of wills—a post he has held for the past 15 years—was announced yesterday by the White House. Victor S. Mersch, first deputy, register, was recommended Monday to President Roosevelt by the 12 judges of the court to fill the vacancy for the duration of the war.

Cogswell, 49 years old and a native Washingtonian, volunteered in the Army in April, 1917, and went overseas with the 319th Infantry, Eightieth Division. Only 10 days before the signing of the armistice, he said, he was seriously wounded during the battle of the Argonne and was helped into a shellhole by Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, who was fighting nearby.

Honorably discharged as a first lieutenant in September, 1919, Cogswell returned to the Register of Wills office with four military citations for valor to his credit—the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star with oak leaf cluster, the Order of the Purple Heart and French Croix de Guerre.

He joined the wills registry as a file clerk on October 1, 1912, and worked up through many grades until his appointment to the highest post there on October 3, 1927.

President Roosevelt, in accepting Cogswell's resignation, expressed gratitude for the "faithful and efficient manner" in which he had served the office for so many years.

The Chief Executive accepted the resignation as of 4 p. m. yesterday, the end of the work day at District Court, but ordered it into effect January 26, 1943, at the end of Cogswell's accumulated annual leave.

In his letter of resignation, Cogswell requested that his leave be regarded as temporary, and expressed the hope that he would be reappointed at the end of hostilities.

Cogswell lives at 1004 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest with his mother. His brother is Robert F. Cogswell, District rent administrator.

Mersch, who is expected to take Cogswell's place, was appointed deputy register in 1927. He lives at 3615 Quesada Street Northwest.

8 WAAC Officers Are First Graduates From Army School

Eight WAAC lieutenants became the first to be graduated from a regular Army service school when they finished training yesterday at the Adjutant General's School at Fort Washington yesterday.

They were in a class of 356 completing courses in Army administration and personnel classification and will be assigned to the WAAC training schools at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, and Daytona Beach, Fla., to relieve Regular Army officers.

WAAC Director Oveta Culp Hobby, and Col. H. C. Heldridge, commandant, spoke at the graduation ceremonies.

Those graduated were: Lieut. Marjorie W. Garson, Montclair, N. J., formerly a life insurance executive; Lieut. Helen H. Beuffler, a New York City swimming teacher; Lieut. Edel Sattre, Moorehead, Minn., a high school principal; Lieut. Annie R. Pearson, Bamburg, S. C., a home service agent; Lieut. Mary M. Booker, Waukegan, Ill., office manager; Lieut Ruth Spivak, Chicago, secretary; Lieut. Anna M. Danavosky, Chicago, high school teacher, and Lieut. Mary S. Strayhon, Sioux Falls, S. Dak., speech teacher.

WLB Favors Equal Pay For Women

Employers Granted Power to Adjust Salaries Toward Such a Basis

The War Labor Board yesterday approved the principle that women should get the same pay as men for the same work.

The WLB, by its general order No. 16, authorized employers "to make wage or salary adjustments to equalize the wages of women with those of men for comparable quality and quantity of work without prior board approval."

The order required such adjustments to be reported to the WLB and provided that they should not be the basis of increases in price ceilings.

The half million dollar a year raise granted 3200 District employes by the District Commissioners Tuesday was given the protection of another WLB order. This placed the District within the provisions of general order No. 12, which permits county and municipal governments to grant pay increases, in certain cases, without prior approval.

The board reserved the right to reopen such cases when it wished, but the employes will get the increases pending such reopening.

The WLB delegated the power to adjust the pay of about a million civilians employed by the War Department to the Secretary of War, in its general order No. 14 yesterday. A procedure for exercising this power was outlined in the order.

Spars Start Recruit Drive Here Today

SPARS, the new women's reserve of the Coast Guard, will take advantage of the holiday today to start its drive to recruit 4000 women by the end of 1943.

The Office of Naval Procurement, 1320 G Street Northwest, will be open all day for the enlistment of SPARS and WAVES, it was announced yesterday.

At her first press conference, yesterday Lieut. Comdr. Dorothy C. Stratton, director of the SPARS, revealed that plans had been made for the SPARS and the WAVES to work in close cooperation. SPARS will be recruited through the Offices of Naval Procurement, like the WAVES.

Marital Restrictions

Enlistment requirements for SPARS and WAVES are alike, and the two will be trained in the same schools. SPARS may not marry, or be married on enlistment to officers or enlisted men in the Coast Guard, and WAVES may not marry or be married on enlistment to officers or enlisted men of the Navy.

In order to have an immediate nucleus of procurement officers for the SPARS, some of the women now taking officer's training at the WAVES school at Smith College will switch their branch of service and become SPARS, Commander Stratton revealed.

Commander Stratton said the SPARS will be 8000 strong by the end of 1944, "if the war lasts that long." Approximately 200 officers will be commissioned for the first year's force of 4000, the director said, although by law only 18 full lieutenants may be created.

3000 Yeomen Sought

Coast Guard officers have already placed requests for 3000 yeomen and storekeepers, 175 radiomen, and 585 seamen to replace men for active duty. The yeomen, in the main, are expert stenographers and bookkeepers, seamen, general office workers and storekeepers clerical workers.

There is also a need for pharmacists' mates and photographers and for women to serve in the commissary branch.

All enlisted personnel will be trained at the "Boots" school at Cedar Falls, Iowa, which opens December 15. Coast Guard officers will give special indoctrination courses to the SPARS.

Twin Boys Born To D. C. Couple, Kin to Churchill

Two more American relations of Prime Minister Winston Churchill arrived in Washington yesterday.

They were sons born to Mr. and Mrs. Jack D. Cornett, 1115 B Street Northwest, at Sibley Hospital. They were christened Jack Leon and Charles Daniel Cornett.

Churchill has not yet been notified of the increase in his relations.

The relationship traces through the maternal grandmother of the twins, Mrs. Charles Grotz of 3018 East Capitol Street. A maternal forebear of Mrs. Grotz's was a Churchill and of the same family which produced England's war leader.

In addition, the two little fellows have another distinction in that their mother, Mrs. Virginia Louise Cornett, is herself a twin.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Wife Sees Snub in In-Laws' Failure To Address Letters Jointly to Her Husband And Herself; Is Her Inference Justified?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a small problem that I have long wanted to consult you about; but I have hesitated because it is a chore for me to put things in writing. I will start my story by saying that when I was a young girl, my older brothers got married and moved to far-off places. I was instructed at once by my mother to address letters to them in the name of "Mr. and Mrs." She said if I addressed my letters just to "Mr. John Doe" (to coin a name), his wife might feel "left out," and we wanted her to feel that she was one of us.

That idea was implanted in my mind early in life and has stuck with me ever since. Consequently, when I got married years later and moved away from our folks (my husband's and mine), and mail from his family started coming, addressed to my husband alone, I felt that it was an insult to me and that I was not accepted by his family. All mail that comes from my family is addressed to both of us. At first, when I told my husband how I felt about this, he just laughed in a smug sort of way and I decided that perhaps it was just a difference in training and that I ought to overlook it. That is what I have done, until recently, although secretly it has rankled, on and on.

Resentment Leads To Violent Scene

Just recently, however, my mother has been seriously ill in a far-off city. My husband's sister lives in the same city and occasionally goes to see her. Because my mother was too ill to write, I went for weeks without word from her and was nearly worried out of my mind. There seemed to be no way to hear from her, unless my sister-in-law took it upon herself to write. This she did, after a time; but her letter came addressed to my husband, so that I had to wait all day, until he got home, for news of my mother. I called him at his office to say the letter had come, but he did not give me permission to open it. When he finally got home and opened the letter, and there was some word there from my mother, I flew into a rage, snatched the letter from his hand and tore it to pieces.

That was an awful thing for me to do; not at all like me. I was as much surprised as he was and I cannot explain it, except that I haven't been well and have been worried nearly to distraction about my mother, so that when word did come, my nerves gave way. My husband has been meek as a lamb since then, not at all like the bull-headed German he usually is. There is one thing I can say without doubting—he loves me deeply and devotedly and I want to do what is right by him. So please set me straight on this matter—once and for all.

S. O. S.

Margin of Privacy Is Usually Observed

DEAR S. O. S.: Although your mother's intentions were of the best—inspired by loving kindness and a sense of fair play—she certainly implanted a wrong idea in your mind, in giving you to think, early in life, that husband and wife haven't a right to some margin of privacy in correspondence with their respective families. As a matter of fact, a cardinal principle of "good form," as well as of honorable behavior, in household relationships, is that members shall refrain from any display of lively curiosity concerning the contents of each other's mail. Inordinate interest in matters of this kind may be quite as offensive as deliberate eavesdropping and keyhole peeping.

The only pardonable exception to this general rule would be in case of emergency—as in the instance of the letter your husband recently received, bearing hoped-for news of your seriously sick mother. It was quite natural, in the circumstances, that you would telephone him at the office, in the expectation of having him say, "Why don't you open it, and see what it says?" And he was censurably remiss in human sympathy, in failing to urge that course upon you. However, it is possible that his hurtful failure to volunteer such permission was the net result of your earlier criticism of his family's policy of addressing their letters solely to him—a criticism that would tend to "get his back up," making him consciously determined to preserve his "private rights" on that score. Especially since he had never been indoctrinated with your family's very special theory of careful inclusiveness in correspondence.

Unwise to Judge By Rigid Rules

And speaking of that theory, I must say that so far as I am able to learn, it is a distinct departure from general practice. I was told by at least half a dozen persons whom I queried at random today—as spokesmen for different family groups—that it never would occur to them to address letters to "Mr. and Mrs. So-and-So," when writing to married kin. Their unanimous attitude seemed to be that if they were dispatching a letter to the home of a married brother, say, the letter would be addressed to either husband or wife—depending upon the nature of its contents—but not to both. As one woman explained, "If I were writing primarily to discuss business or family matters with my brother, I would address the letter to him, of course, including messages for his wife. But if I were just paying them both a visit by letter—telling the latest gossip from our end of the line—I would address myself to his wife; because that's the kind of letter women write to each other. Not that men don't enjoy getting such news, but they hardly ever take time to keep up that type of correspondence."

You may say that you would have been more than content with so much consideration; but that your husband's people have never once addressed a chatty letter to you personally. Such could be true, and yet not signify lack of friendly feeling. Had your been less inclined to hold them rigidly to account by your standards of what was right, and more disposed to accommodate readily to their surprisingly different ways of doing things, you could have established a link of feminine correspondence with in-laws, I think. You could have taken the initiative in sending gifts on anniversaries or holidays, accompanied by a cordial note, signed (in your handwriting) with your name and your husband's—addressed to your sister-in-law or mother-in-law. And certainly after your mother fell ill, and the days dragged by without word of her, it would have been a most natural and "feeling" gesture, for you to have written a letter to your sister-in-law in that city—even though you had never written her before—asking her please to keep you informed, as she could, of latest developments.

Husband's Conduct Was Less Than Kind

So, the straight dope on your grievance seems to be that it's hardly warranted, in the main; although, on the other hand, your husband gave a rather poor account of himself—as your hysterical outburst appears to have convinced him—in wilfully prolonging your tense anxiety of recent days, when a generous word from him could have given you hours of grateful respite. However, your violent explosion is not to be attributed to severely accentuated filial distress. It was definitely the expression of long-suppressed wifely resentment—grabbing a chance to vent itself.

American Tradition

By Malvina Lindsay

IT is the Thanksgiving dinner—turkey and cranberries and pumpkin pie, and a harvest centerpiece, and a homecoming crowd around the dining room extension table, and the men trying to tell each other what Hitler will do and what Roosevelt should do, and being constantly forestalled by solicitous women urging them to take more on their already heaped plates of the sweet potatoes, or the spiced pears, or the dried corn Aunt Jenny sent.

IT is the Fourth of July picnic, the Labor Day weekend's farewell to summer, the Halloween tick-tacking and masquerade, the frenzied rush of Christmas shoppers, the blooming forth in stores and offices around February 22 of George Washington's lofty and immobile countenance, the ever enlarging influence in the Nation's heart of Abraham Lincoln.

IT is—in peacetime—the honeymoon and vacation sight-seers photographing each other on the steps of the Capitol or the Supreme Court building, streaming through the White House behind guides, curious, eager, wondering, yet never timorous, over-awed or servile in the presence of either a policeman or a Senator, walking in high places with quiet self-assurance and an air that seems to say, "All of this is ours and we are proud of it."

IT is a lot of little things that absent men must now remember—Saturday night and its escape into romance at the movies or behind the wheel of a motor car . . . the corner drug store with its cokes, ice cream sodas, fountain repartee, and passing show of pretty girls . . . the football game with the cheering crowds in the stadium and the college band playing its stirring, yet strangely nostalgic music . . . swing music on the radio and at the dances . . . sweater girls . . . beauty queens . . . zoot suits . . . the whir of airplanes swooping low in the sky, and oldsters speculating on what the world will see next.

IT is a procession of family flivvers on the highways from Maine to California carrying families who are determined to see Hollywood, New York and Chicago and Palm Beach, who will not sit home like European peasants dreaming some day of seeing Carcassonne a few miles distant, but who goaded by the restlessness and curiosity that sent their forefathers adventuring in stagecoach and covered wagon set off for distant fields and return home bringing with them the knowledge that a State line or a Nation's boundary do not make men unlike their brothers.

IT is club women drawing up resolutions and petitions, starting "movements" and braving ridicule to get something done that should be done . . . starry eyed young men and "decent citizens" butting their heads in civic reform crusades against entrenched political graft . . . mass meetings of aroused men and women with orators pounding tables . . . citizens on streetcars and in drug stores and hotel lobbies declaiming their views . . . avalanches of letters to Congress and the President . . . parades, handbills, letters "To the Editor" . . . the people's voice that has never been stilled in this country and that no dictator will ever be able to silence.

IT is half a dozen passengers on streetcar or bus eagerly trying to direct a stranger who has inquired the way . . . the easy conversation in men's smoking rooms on trains . . . the concern about the comings and goings of neighbors . . . the camaraderie of crowds marooned in traffic . . . the eagerness to help halting old people and mothers with babies . . . the friendliness of America, the lonely spirit of the pioneer still seeking expression, and frequently being misunderstood and misjudged by those aping the social manners of older, more crowded and more suspicious worlds.

IT is the high spirits and lustiness of youth on a holiday . . . the giggling of high school girls in streetcars . . . the shouts for the home team and the cat calls at the umpire at the baseball game . . . the din and horseplay at political conventions . . . the near-fist fights at political rallies . . . the rush and surge of crowds on city streets . . . the ebullient curiosity of tourists in foreign countries . . . many of the things that effete Americans once deplored as crude and vulgar on the part of their countrymen but that now in a more rough and tumble world they have recognized proudly as part of a Nation's virility.

IT is Robert Fulton and Eli Whitney and Thomas Edison and the Wright Brothers and Coulee Dam and the Tennessee Valley, the Empire State building, and the San Francisco Bridge . . . the covered wagon trains and the California Gold Rush . . . electric gadgets, bathrooms and modern bungalows . . . dreams of cancer cure and of family flivver airplanes . . . the winning of battles with other men and with nature against great odds . . . the daring of thinking and living that the Nation feared it had lost in the cushioning of soft living, and that has flared out again in North Africa and in the Solomon Islands, a daring that will continue to "Do the Impossible" in winning the war and meeting the problems of [illegible]

FUEL FOR THE COLD MONTHS

By Elizabeth M'Rae Boykin

When our hearts were young and gay we were content with any kind of fireplace fuel that made a pretty flame. What cared we for the heat . . . the fact was the heat was usually a necessary evil that meant opening all the windows because of our bounteous central heating arrangements.

Now even the most frivolous are learning about cured wood and bituminous coal. For there's a big difference in the heating qualities of various types of fuel—a big difference between fireplace and stove for auxiliary heating. Today we will present some of the comparative values of fuels and fires for those threatened occasions this winter when the central heating system won't be up to the job of keeping us as warm as we like to be. For those who depend entirely on stove or fireplace heat this information will be helpful also in getting best efficiency out of fuel.

Waste of Heat

A fireplace is more wasteful of all fuels than a stove because so much of the heat goes up the chimney. Coal burns at only about 15 per cent of capacity in a fireplace—not the fault of the coal, but of the fireplace. And it takes 10 times as much wood in a fireplace as in a stove to heat a room equally well. An arrangement for recirculating the heat in your fireplace helps some, but this involves some construction work and doesn't make up for the difference between fireplace and stove efficiency. So get a stove if you can beg or borrow it . . . or maybe you have influence in the stove world.

If you get a stove, the experts say that the quality of coal to use depends on the stove. For fireplace, here is the story: Cannel coal, favorite of those who like its lovely light, is not as efficient for fireplaces as anthracite, although it is about equal in efficiency with some of the high volatile bituminous coals. Of course, you cannot burn anthracite without a proper grate, whereas cannel coal can be laid across a couple of bars if necessary. But with the proper grate for working up a sustained heat, anthracite is mose efficient. You should buy the larger sizes of anthracite, not the pea size.

As for wood, here are the comments made by a Government spokesman who has made a comprehensive study of the subject: A cord of hardwood is about the equivalent in heat value of one ton of coal. Some soft woods contain as little as half the heat value of coal. Seasoned wood burns more efficiently than green wood. Green wood is apt to fill the chimney with creosote, and burning it for cooking is likely to spoil the meal and the cook's disposition.

Quick Flame

Pine gives a quicker, hotter fire and burns in a shorter time than hardwoods such as birch and oak. Most hardwoods give a more intense flame and a very steady heat. The 10 best varieties of hardwood for heat are: hickory, oak, birch, beech, hard maple, ash, elm, locust, long-leaf pine and cherry.

If you've belonged to a clean-hearth school you will have to mend your ways. Seems that ashes should be kept to the level of the andirons, forming a bed for the accumulation of glowing charcoal. This yields steady heat and aids in igniting fresh fuel as it is added.

One way of conserving what heat you have this winter will be by weatherstripping the cracks around the windows and doors with wool felt weatherstripping. This is still available and will largely replace the metal and rubber weatherstripping for auxiliary use. It quiets the rattles, too. Window shades will help, too, if you keep them drawn, even in the daytime, when the sun is not shining directly on the windows and you do not need them open for light. Curtains, even sheer ones, pulled across your windows, instead of being tied back, help keep the chill of the panes from coming in—besides, they make the room look warmer. Heavy draperies that can be drawn entirely across the windows at night will not only hold heat in the room, but will also serve for blackout use. Cold walls cool the room, too—these can be made warmer by hanging lengths of decorative fabric, rugs or tapestries on them. Book shelves filled with books also help keep cold walls from chilling the room.

Close Damper

Heat can escape through the chimney if you do not keep the damper closed when the fire is not burning in the fireplace. If there is no damper, stuff paper into the chimney opening between fires. Open doorways make drafts that rob the house of heat, so it wouldn't be a bad idea to go back to old-time portieres that are wide and full enough to meet in the center and long enough to drag to the floor at the bottom so drafts can't get under. Cross-drafts from doors and windows should be watched; in the room in which you have a fire burning, keep doors closed or portieres drawn, otherwise the fire, which creates a natural draft, will draw heat from the other rooms and it will escape up the flue.

That little electric heater you have been counting on should be used with discretion. Electricity, too, is getting scarce and shouldn't be wasted. Use such heaters for small rooms—bathroom and such like—rather than for the living room. And be careful not to overload the circuit when you have your heater on; the heater uses a lot of watts. Don't plug the heater on with lamp cords and extension cords, either. Plug it directly into the outlet, for lamp cords are not made to carry such a heavy load of electricity as the heater demands.

These Women!

By d'Alessio

"We WALKED all the way from home. It's just a little farther than from where we used to park the car."

Let's Give Thanks for Thanksgiving

SOME weeks ago we asked several people in different strata of society what they had to be thankful for this year, this year of war and sudden death, and taxes and shortages and sacrifices and everything else that goes with war.

Everyone of these people said in effect, "Even though we are at war we have plenty to be thankful for—even more so than in many peace time years." They were thankful for the Army, the Navy, the Marines, the Air Corps, the men of Bataan, of Wake Island, of Guadalcanal, and North Africa. They were thankful that their boys who were going off to war were getting the finest equipment, the best food and the best medical and spiritual care of any army of any time.

They were thankful for our national leaders and thankful for the democratic freedom that entitles them to criticize their leaders' work and make jokes about them, and even to change them if necessary. They were thankful that this country alone, of all the world, even with rationing of sugar and coffee and other foods, still could be the only country where a truly balanced diet could be obtained by the ordinary man with an ordinary income.

They were thankful for the parts that they have been permitted to play in our nation's all-out war, the privilege of saving by buying War Bonds, the privilege of helping our neighbors in Civilian Defense Work and the very personal privilege of contributing blood which may save the lives of some of our boys in battle.

They were thankful for the democratic process that treats everyone alike—the "A" card that the janitor gets will obtain as much gas as will the "A" card of the chairman of the board. The half pound of coffee in the college professor's cupboard is exactly equal to the half pound in the ditch digger's kitchen.

Some of the young ladies we questioned were somewhat vague about exactly what they were thankful for, with all the young men off to the wars—but they all said—"You bet we're thankful."

And so are we.

Your Figure, Madame!

On all sides, people are hollering about the grocery bill—and with reason. But food costs so much to produce that it can't be done cheap and we are going to have to revise our sense of values.

It used to be that when prices rose we cut down on the three good squares to pay the rent, keep up with the styles, and send the children to dancing school. We still have to pay the landlord, but we can get along without the luxuries. Anyway, last year's clothes are the height of fashion. But we can't get by on poor nutrition. The right food is too important to health. It makes for steady nerves and sturdy resistance.

Stretching the pursestrings to include all the essential foods means knowing your nutrition. When oranges cost too much, there are grapefruit and tomatoes. Half a grapefruit gives almost your day's supply of Vitamin C. Tomatoes are another good source and stewed tomatoes are higher than the plain juice. To bolster the Vitamin C content of the menus, serve plenty of raw cabbage and cook the potatoes in their jackets. Then, when oranges are in season, give a whole orange to each person, instead of always serving the juice. A fairly good-size orange furnishes 1200 units of Vitamin C, as compared with the 600 units in three and one-half ounces of juice.

Milk furnishes so much in the way of nutrition that you should not try to cut down on the quantity each person needs. But you can cut down on the bill by using some dried skim-milk and some evaporated milk for cooking and for making beverages.

All the staples should be made to furnish their maximum of the protective elements. When you buy rice, specify the brown kind. Besides, it is delicious. And have all the bread, cereals and flour either the 100 per cent whole-grain brands or that which has been enriched.

Now that meat is rationed, use more or the organs. You can't do better by your family than to serve the kidneys, brains, liver, heart and pancreas. And you can serve more fish of various kinds. The meat organs and fish are less expensive than muscle meats and some are much more nutritious.

It is patriotic to be economical. The Government has asked us to save on electricity and to keep the telephone bills down. It saves gas to cook vegetables quickly—the way they should be cooked to preserve the minerals and vitamins—and to cook the entire meal in the oven when it is in use. But it is not economical to cut down on the foods that are essential to health.

Discovering a Chesterfield seems, on the face of it, a little like "discovering" Caruso. The season has proven it to be the people's choice among coats all over the United States of America because every one can wear it over everything.

This Chesterfield, however, is rather special. The fabric is pure wool with a soft suede-like finish seldom found in coats at this price. It is lined in quilted satin and has a chamois interlining across the shoulder blades, a fool-proof windbreaker. The sleeves are cut raglan to afford that nice casual look around the shoulders. Swing it over your suits, slacks or dresses, it looks well with any kind of costume. Remove the linings and you have a perfect coat for spring. It comes in several good colors . . . about $40.

For further information please call National 4200, Extension 324, between 9 and 5 tomorrow, and our Columbus department will be glad to tell you where to find it.

Gratitude in Time of Trouble

This is a season for taking stock, for making an inventory of blessings. Strangely enough, times of adversity usually bring a clarification of values, a feeling of humble thanks and hope that gives added significance to that home holiday we usually celebrate so blithely. "What to be thankful for." Indeed! The very tradition of Thanksgiving Day is steeped with gratitude in times of trouble.

Certainly, the early Pilgrim fathers did not have such an easy time of it. And Abraham Lincoln proclaimed the first official Thanksgiving Day during the bloody, lean days of the war between the States. As we approach this Thanksgiving, once again we must find the true joy of this day we set aside for honest gratitude—for this will be no bang-up holiday, complete with football games, overstuffed dining table and too-high spirits. It must be a day of stock-taking, a day of family fulfillment and a day of prayer.

Going back to the simple, hearty Thanksgiving traditions will add much to the day's meaning. Get together as many relatives as you can this year and share the work and expense for a fair and fun-making family reunion . . . that's the best way to keep faith with your men who are off to the wars.

Use what you have for Thanksgiving decorations — pumpkins, squash, heads of broccoli and wisps of wheat may not be chichi, but they are honest and beautiful. Be sure to include servicemen at your family feast (your local USO will tell you how to go about inviting the boys).

Stick to the traditional in food and talk—the outsize turkey with the family's favorite stuffing and the retelling of the family's favorite jokes

The table should be set with all the dignity of your best damask, china and silver, with that centerpiece of fruit or vegetables to remind you that this year food is a weapon as well as a shield. And don't make your center arrangement too high; keep it low enough to underpass the family chatter that will make your dinner a complete success.

Your Baby and Mine

How Should I Make Up Baby's Bed?

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The well-fed baby, who is a good sleeper, has no difficulty in sleeping all night from about the third or fourth month of life. This isn't forced upon him, for he is nursed if he wakens to be nursed or bottle-fed. But if he sleeps he is allowed to sleep, and thus establish habits which are a blessing to his tired mother and no detriment to his own excellent gain in weight.

Mrs. W. P. says her baby is only 3½ months old and is sleeping all night. "I thought the baby was rather young to go without a night feeding," she writes, "but she did it of her own accord. So surely she must be getting enough to eat?

"She is still in her bassinet, but I expect to put her in her crib within the next two weeks. And this brings up my real problem. How do you make up a baby's bed so as to keep it reasonably dry? The mattress is an inner-spring with a wetproof cover, and I have purchased a rubber sheet. As yet I have no quilted pads large enough for a large crib. If I use a sleeping bag for the baby how can this be kept dry? This seems like a very foolish request, but I wish you would tell me in just the order you put on each of the different articles."

This isn't foolish, since you don't know the answer. It would be foolish if you didn't ask. Since your mattress has a wetproof cover you really don't need the rubber sheet. But if you wish you can use it anyway, tucking it in firmly and pinning it under the mattress so it will stay in place. Over this goes the quilted pad of a size to cover the top of the mattress. Then the sheet.

When you put the baby to bed you can cut your present quilted pads into oblongs about 9 by 12 inches, overcast the edges or bind them and slip one of these under the baby's nightie front or back according to whether she sleeps on back or stomach.

The sleeping bags, especially those which have backs (and I think they should) are bound to get damp, though not excessively so if the baby is well diapered. And you may use a soaker over the cotton diaper as these are very warm and absorbent and useful for the winter season.

You should have two or three cotton-flannel, sleeping bags so that one can be in use, one in the wash and one ready for an emergency. By such means you ought to keep the sheets fairly dry, the mattress unspoiled and the baby very comfortable.

Our leaflet, "Sleeping Habits," contains a description of how to make a simple sleeping bag. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Vanishing Trim

Shoes trimmed with contrasting leather were fashion news in 1930. But 1942 sees them vanishing from the fashion picture as a result of WPB order M-217 forbidding leather trim on leather.

Guests making purchases of the larger denominations, starting at $500, will be placed on a special sponsors' list, it was announced.

Members with records of service in various types of war work will appear in a "victory parade," wearing the uniform and insignia of their particular fields. D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs Opens Drive on Prostitution, Alcohol

Members Hope To Wipe Out Venereal Disease

Use of CCC Camps For Isolation Purposes Backed

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

MEMBERS OF THE District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs went on a rampage yesterday to clean up venereal diseases, prostitution and to reduce the sale and drinking of alcoholic beverages.

Miss Reynolds

In an all-day meeting at the Gill-Bert, interspersed with a 1 o'clock luncheon, the club members indorsed a series of resolutions dealing with alcohol and prostitution. Making a tremendous effort to control both, the Federation adopted the following resolution:

"Be it resolved that the District of Columbia Federation recommends the passing of laws (if there are none at present), which will outlaw all phases of prostitution and penalize all racketeers engaged in the traffic. And that the male and female offenders be treated with equal severity. But whenever possible rehabilitation of prostitutes be made."

Moreover, the federation advocated the utilization of former CCC camps as isolation and treatment centers for cases of venereal diseases in places where adequate hospitalization facilities are not available.

Follow Board's Lead

These resolutions were read by Mrs. Charles H. Bair, chairman of the club's resolutions committee.

Following the lead taken by the General Federation of Women's Clubs at a recent board meeting in Chicago, the District Federation urged that regulations be established to prevent servicemen from consuming large quantities of alcoholic beverages while in uniform and to penalize men seen intoxicated while wearing the uniform of the United States.

Mrs. Aubrey Wadden read a series of pledges, indorsed by the federation, which dealt with the war effort. Their gist was to bring the war effort up to maximum efficiency by reducing to a minimum the serving and drinking of alcoholic beverages.

In addition the federation members encouraged the Army and Navy pledge which the boys would take to reduce to minimum the drinking of alcohol while off duty and to abstain entirely while on duty. Also, that promotions and commissions in the services be based in part on sobriety.

Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins presided over both the morning and afternoon sessions.

The fine arts section held an exhibit and sale, proceeds of which—at least half—will be turned over to the Mount Alto Hospital Fund, to provide Christmas gifts for the patients.

MISS RUTH C. MAVRICK, member of the Omicron Chapter, KAPPA BETA PI, International Legal Sorority, has joined the ranks of the WAVES. On military leave from her position with the FFC—for the duration—she's now completing an indoctrination course at Smith College.

WHEN Carlos A. Arroyo del Rio, President of Ecuador, now in Washington, gets around to opening his mail he will find a letter from the PEOPLE'S MANDATE COMMITTEE FOR INTER-AMERICAN PEACE AND COOPERATION. Text of the letter follows:

"On behalf of the People's Mandate Committee for Inter-American Peace and Cooperation may we express to you our appreciation of the honor you have done our country through your visit here. We are proud to join in greeting you and bidding you welcome to the United States.

"Our committee has warm personal ties with many of your people. As you may know, some of the outstanding women in Ecuador are actively cooperating with the work we are doing for American solidarity and a lasting peace.

"Your visit, we are confident, will serve to strengthen the ties of friendly feeling between our governments and peoples. We hope the best of good fortune may attend your stay here.

"With assurance of highest regards, believe me,

"Very sincerely yours,

"MABEL VERNON, Director."

The People's Mandate Committee, which is working in all the American republics, has taken particular interest in the last year in helping in the rehabilitation of El Oro, the southernmost province of Ecuador.

"A Parallel of Indian Nationalism and Zionism" will be the subject of a talk by David Sargon of Bombay, India, when he speaks to the SATURDAY EVENING DISCUSSION GROUP Saturday night. These weekly discussions are held at the Zionist House, 1720 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Now with the British Supply Mission here, Sargon was formerly editor of the Jewish Tribune in Bombay.

MRS. DUDLEY F. HOLTMAN and Mrs. T. F. Law are in charge of arrangements for the annual Thanksgiving tea and Donation Day program to be held tomorrow, 3 to 9 o'clock at the D. C. METHODIST HOME, Connecticut Avenue and Ellicott Street. Sponsoring the tea is the board of managers. During the afternoon and night a musical program will be given by the talented boy violinist, Ely Faminaya; Mrs. Ralph W. Rolfe and Mrs. Cornelia Long Kinsella, pianists. Donations of food and linens are still needed—that means plenty acceptable, even at the last minute.

Professional Writers to Hold Book Review Tea Saturday

The Professional Writers Club will entertain at a Book Review Tea Saturday at 4:30 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A. in honor of Miss Mary Badger Wilson, honorary member of the club and the author of many short stories and books. In Miss Wilson's most recently published novel, "Canon Brett," she has told a strong, moving story of a young clergyman and the great cathedral in which he serves. "Canon Brett" will be reviewed by Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, a member of the club.

Miss Wanda Mae Johnson, president, will welcome members and guests, and a special word of greeting will be brought by Miss Mary M. Burnett, executive secretary of the Education Department of the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Irving W. Ketchum, hostess of the afternoon, will preside at the tea table and will be assisted by Mrs. Alfred F. Leder, Miss Mary Jane Brumley, Mrs. Agnes Wright and Miss Elizabeth Phillips, hospitality chairman.

Mrs. Winifred Houghton, accompanying herself on the guitar, will sing a collection of South American folksongs, many of which have never been published but were taught her by natives. Miss Eliza Gwendolin Taylor will also entertain with several songs, accompanied on the piano by Miss Catherine Murray. Both Mrs. Houghton and Miss Taylor are members of the Professional Writers' Club.

Mrs. John M. Dewberry will keep the guestbook, in which members, guests and prospective members will be asked to register.

CHAPTER 42

IN the end the old man agreed to give Philip his second proposition, a half share of such profits as the real estate showed, to be paid at the end of each six-month period, his present salary to continue and be charged against it. This was what Philip really wanted; he had named $10,000 salary because such a figure would loom gigantic to Derboek and be instantly denied. His sole regret was that the other method kept him on short rations for another half year, but he was sure he could make far more than on salary. His statement had been based only on what he had already accomplished and had not included some of his most promising schemes.

All this was not done without dreadful lamentations and sharp twistings and turnings and groans of torture from Derboek and these went so far that at last they did something strange to Philip. It was a revelation of miserliness, of what it can do to a man's spirit. It disgusted him; it even made him a little fearful. I'd rather never have a nickel than be like that when I'm old, he thought. He's like a ruthless, starving, old beast! And for what! He doesn't use it; he only wants to have it, to own it. Something long past ticked in his memory—hadn't Elin said this identical thing to him; in other words, long ago? But I'm doing this to give Van a chance in life. I've got something to work for. I'm not grabbing for grabbing's sake. Nonetheless, there was a prickle of doubt in his elation.

Well, his way was open before him now and he entered on it with redoubled energy, racing against time, for time was his greatest enemy. Though Derboek was as tough in spirit as ever, his body was increasingly frail; he couldn't live forever and he might not live long. Every morning that Philip went into his office it was with the wonder if the old man would be there, bent over his desk, snapping out his commands to Miss Sisk, thumbing his account books, watching his pennies as if they were ducats. He was harder than ever on Philip, piling commissions on him cunningly to give him as little time as possible for his extra labors, accusing him of neglect and carelessness. But Philip was cunning, too; once he escaped he would stay out as long as he needed and come in boldly without excuse. He knew that Derboek was well trapped in his longing to profit for himself, even though he loathed the thought of Philip's sharing it.

Cuts Down Further On His Living Costs

Now Philip had less time than before to think about his home, his wife, and his son. He sent a little check the first of each month to Elin and he moved to a cheaper hotel and lived for as little as he could, oblivious to discomfort. One thing he did allow himself, some new clothes, and for these he went back to his former tailor and bought good materials, for the bill would not be sent for six months and he would then be able to pay it without touching his savings. He had the man renovate two of his old suits and the old luxury of being well dressed gave a lift to his morale.

And then one day in early summer, as he was passing Channing Park's office, he couldn't resist the temptation to see him. Channing met him as cordially as before, but this time it seemed far more genuine. "Well, stranger, I'm glad to see you," he said. "Mabel was asking about you the other night, asked me if I never saw you."

"That was kind of her," said Philip speciously. "How are you both, Channing?"

"Oh, fine, fine! I suppose you're still with the Derboek properties—you must be doing pretty well." His eyes measured Philip's appearance, taking in the new suit, the smart tie.

Philip smiled. "Not bad for these hard times. I've had more genial partners than Derboek, though."

"Partnership? Well, that's pretty slick. How—how's Doug Coulter making out?"

"I wouldn't know," said Philip. "He was howling like a wolf the last time I heard from him, said he was down and out, but—you never can tell. I must push off; this is my busy day. I only dropped in to say hello . . . I'll call you up soon—you must have lunch with me."

Channing followed him to the door. "Delighted, any time. Glad to have seen you, Phil; glad you're doing so well. They can't keep a good man down . . . ha-ha-ha—can they? Make that lunch date soon, will you? There's a lot of things I'd like to talk over with you. Doing anything in the market?"

"Very little . . . but I've got one or two little deals on that don't look too bad."

"I'll bet you have. You always were a wiz in the market."

Philip went away satisfied. That score was settled, the memory of Channing's evasion need trouble him no longer. When he'd collected for his first term of the Derboek agreement he'd redeem his promise to ask Channing out to lunch and swagger a little more. Swagger and brag were the only manners that Channing recognized for a successful man. And then he thought "Why should I waste my time or money to impress that big stiff? Charge him off and forget him."

He would have liked to call on Bill Tench and brag and swagger a little there, but that was different. There was a peculiar soreness in his heart against Tench. Tench had been his friend. He had respected Tench's ability and character. Character! That was almost funny. For all his character, Tench hadn't hesitated to come into his home and make love to Elin! What if he, Philip, had been neglecting Elin and playing around with Katie Thomson . . . that didn't excuse Tench. And then—at that Christmas party . . . far more at home in the Bryant house than was its owner. I stood out there in the cold and had to watch him playing the tame cat, thought Philip. He couldn't forget it. He didn't want to see Tench.

The memory of Tench's supposed offense brought back another memory—Katie Thomson. For the first time in a long, long while he looked at the dramatic advertising and saw that Katie was playing in a revival of The School for Scandal in a smallish theater, not under the Lennox aegis. Curiosity moved him and one night when there was no need of working in the evening he went uptown and bought a seat in the balcony.

Visit to Theater Is Disillusioning

The audience was distinctly "cut-rate" and the theater was shabby and not well kept. How Katie must loathe it! There wasn't a known-name in the cast but Katie's—she wouldn't mind that so much, but it all smacked of make-shift and come-down. To his surprise he found that he wasn't a bit excited when Katie came on. She was only a handsome, over-blown actress, competent enough but not thrilling, in a cheap production of a stitled old play. She was not even working very hard, he noted, just walking through the part without fire or passion. Oh, her voice was beautiful, she was experienced enough to be adequate—but where were her gleam and glamour and dash and that mysterious nth-power that makes a star? Perhaps, he thought, she never had as much of it as I imagined. Perhaps I was just a sucker. She seemed to him now a poor excuse for his great folly. After the second act he went out and did not come back. He would charge off Katie Thomson as finally as he had charged off Channing Park and with as little feeling.

The visit to the theater left Philip with a peculiar loneliness, which he had not felt before. As many times as he had said to himself that his home was no longer his, that his wife and son had forgotten him, it had been more a proud gesture than real belief. Derboek was a constant reminder of what a man without ties, without warmth, without will for anything but money spinning can become. Summer was on its way; his little room was sometimes a shell of airless heat, through which the memory of the green Bryant garden, the breeze-swept veranda and terraces, the high-celled, cool hallway grew always more tempting.

And Van, his son! Van had always loved him, he had loved him through that first separation, loved him dearly. Of course I could still give him things he wanted; I could take him about in town. And Elin wanted me to keep in touch with him—she wouldn't let him see anything was the matter. This time Elin must have told Van the truth, let him make his choice. He'd stay with his mother, of course. Any boy would, thought Philip miserably.

But he wasn't going to give up Van completely. When his first settlement with old Derboek had been made he intended to write the boy, ask him to come and see him, talk with him—tell him he could go to college, that his father wasn't a failure, that he'd made good at last and all he was working for was his son. It would not be long now before he could do this. The six months would soon be over and Derboek was already beginning to moan with grief at the amount he would have to share with Philip, blind to the fact that there would have been nothing for himself if Philip hadn't made it. Philip worked the harder, enjoying the old miser's pangs and thinking more and more of Van.

Exotic Pan-American Union Is Scene Of Event Given by Ecuadorean Envoy

By Marie McNair

The Ecuadorian flag flew from the Pan American Union yesterday; nearby the Stars and Stripes blew in the stiff autumn breeze; and the emblems of all the Pan American nations spread themselves in colorful array in welcome to the President of Ecuador, Carlos Arroyo del Rio, for the reception in his honor given by the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, and Senora de Alfaro.

Inside, several hundred guests made their way up the red carpeted marble stairway to greet Ecuador's Chief Executive and his official representative in Washington, and members of the President's party which includes among others, Vicente Illingworth, Minister of Finance; Dr. Caton Cardenas and Dr. Manuel Benigno Cueva, members of the Senate; Representative Pedro Hidalgo and Jose Ricardo Chiriboga who serves as President Arroyo's secretary general.

President Unveils Bust of Espejo

Just before the doors swung open to admit the first guests, President Arroyo had unveiled the bust of an Ecuadorian hero, Espejo—designed and executed by an Ecuadorian sculptor and recently shipped to this country to rest in the Hall of Heroes at the Pan American Union.

All chiefs of mission of the Diplomatic Corps, members of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet, a group from the congressional circle and from resident society had been bid to this fete which outdid itself in lavishness and elaboration.

Huge chrysanthemums in autumn shades blossomed everywhere, champagne corks popped constantly from the long buffet table set up downstairs and guests wandering about had opportunity to see an exhibition of Ecuadorian handicrafts, including silver work, polychrome wood carvings, paintings and embroideries, all arranged under the supervision of Paul Murphy of the Pan American Union.

In the governing board room there was a special buffet for President Arroyo and his party, with members of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and the chiefs of mission as special guests.

Gold braid on blue dress uniforms sparkled throughout the throng, but the more familiar khaki was as prevalent.

Admiral William E. Leahy, Chief of Staff of the Commander in Chief, chatted in a group which included Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. George Renchard. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was there, and the Secretary of the Navy, Col. Frank Knox, with Mrs. Knox, recently back from a long summer in New England.

Making one of his rare appearances at strictly social functions was the Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, and others glimpsed in the crowd which milled from one buffet table to another were the Chief of Staff, Gen. George Marshall, and Mrs. Marshall; the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso, the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban, and the Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de De Bayle.

Commandant of Marine Corps Present

Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marines, with Mrs. Holcomb, Gen. Blanton Winship, in uniform, were others there to greet our "good-neighbor" and in her uniform of the Red Cross which she has served faithfully for so many years was Miss Mabel Boardman, stopping to chat almost every step.

The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles met the Minister of New Zealand and Mrs. Walter Nash for a brief conversation on the way out. Mrs. Charles McNary and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, both wrapped in furs, came in together. Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, was also there and with Senator Joseph Guffey was his sister, Miss Pauletta Guffey. Senator Theodore Green, Senator Josh Lee, Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph were among Capitol Hill's representatives.

Others—to name but a few at random—were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, the Honduran Minister and Senora de Caceres, Gen. and Mrs. Stuart Fries, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Oscar Albertini, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. John L. Schneider, Miss Frances Wolfe, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Dr. and Mrs. William F. O'Donnell, Mrs. Oscar Melborn, Maj. and Mrs. Albert Hinckley and Senora de Alban.

Welles, Rockefeller Also Entertain

President Arroyo was guest of honor at a men's dinner given by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, following the reception, and earlier in the day was entertained at luncheon by Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and Mrs. Rockefeller.

Members of the Ecuadorian President's official party were at the dinner and others were the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel de Freyre; the Ambassador of Brazil, Carlos Martins; the Ambassador of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante; the Ambassador of Panama, Dr. Ernesto Jaen Guardia; the Ambassador of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Guachalla; the Ambassador of Paraguay, Dr. Celso T. Velazquez, the American Ambassador to Ecuador, Boaz Long; the Charge d'Affaires of Columbia, Alberto Vargas.

Also the Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard; Senator Wallace White, Senator Elbert Thomas, Senator Joseph Guffey, Senator Theodore Green, Representative William R. Thomas, Representative Joseph C. Baldwin, the Solicitor General, Charles Fahy; Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union; Warren Lee Pierson, Dean Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State; Harold Smith, Director of the Budget; Stanley Woodward, Edward Nash and John Melby.

Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles

Public Relations Director Is 'Middleman'

(This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next, to appear on Monday, will be about Rear Admiral William Brent Young, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.)

By Patricia Grady

A middleman—with one of the most difficult jobs in Washington—Maj. Gen. Alexander Day Surles stands between the man in uniform and the people who want to hear about where he is and what he's doing.

Director of the War Department's Bureau of Public Relations, this calm-voiced, confidence-inspiring general has performed his task so creditably, of giving as much information as he can on things military to the public without endangering security, that press and radio reporters regard him as their friend—not as the ogre, ready to pounce on military stories, that censorship officers generally become.

"It's our job to protect the man in uniform from injudicious information," explains this tall general with the alert blue eyes. "Often we can't explain why certain seemingly innocent stories would injure our cause if released. But the North African offensive has solved a lot of our problems. When we say 'no' to an item, the press is ready to believe that the Army may have plans up its sleeve that they know nothing about.

"That is not to say," he continues, "that we have not had magnificent cooperation from the press and radio from the beginning. We have had. And our work is based entirely on cooperation, and looks as if it will continue to be."

From his ear-to-the-ground position General Surles has a quick reaction to American public opinion. "The last few weeks have been responsible for great changes in attitude on the part of the people," he opines. "They now have confidence that their armed forces in Washington are not just sitting, but are doing a good job for them."

The key to General Surles' popularity with the press is in his understanding of their problems. Knowing what a deadline means, he expedites the answers to reporters' queries. The releases sent out from his office are always simply worded, with technical terms put into layman's language. It his aim, implemented by his record, to give the "media of public opinion" as much help as he can.

Always unruffled, with an even-keeled disposition that his subordinates never cease to wonder at, General Surles has an office that is run with the simplicity of a counrty store. It has an air of open friendliness that is a reflection of the general's own personality.

Came the World War, and General Surles went with his regiment to France. Then came duty at the Military Academy, followed by a directorship of athletics at the Third Corps Area headquarters. It was during this duty that he had a chance to coach the all-Army football team that represented the Third Corps in 1923. Next the general was sent back to school, first as a student at the Cavalry School at Fort Riley, Kans. and then at the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. Several years later he was graduated from the Army War College in Washington and assigned as Chief of the Public Relations Branch of the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department.

Has Won Confidence And Respect by 'Understanding'

General Surles is justly proud of his attractive wife and two sons. His oldest son, Maj. Alexander D. Surles, jr., is in desert t-aining in the Southwest, while William Gaines Surles, disappointed at his 4F draft rating, is at work in the Capital.

Realistic, General Surles has promoted a policy of letting radio and press men see for themselves what the Army is doing. Even before the war the general made arrangements for reporters to visit arsenals, airplane factories and Army camps. He believes in military secrecy but only when it is necessary to protect the Allied interests. With a broad background in world affairs, as well as a technical knowledge of warfare, General Surles is a good man to hold a question-and-answer post.

Dreaming of a . . .

WHITE CHRISTMAS

Aren't we all? But, especially the lads in far-away places. He's dreaming as he scrapes the Iceland mud from his boots . . . as he gives his buddy a Christmas hair-cut in Guadalcanal . . . dreaming as he and the boys decorate their hut in Ireland . . . as he brushes up on his French in North Africa.

Give them their dreams—

Have a white Christmas. Have it all tied up with red ribbons and laughter. Dust off the old ornaments and trim a tree . . . any tree. Hang your stockings. Have surprises for all the family. Throw snow-balls. Shout Merry Christmas to the neighbors . . . to strangers, too. Sing Jingle-Bells. Invite everyone in to egg-nog. Do all the things you've always done.

Here's one problem in morale that we can all understand. . . . He's dreaming of a white Christmas, with everyone he knows and loves all starry-eyed and rosey-cheeked and happy. We've got to keep his dreams alive . . . all his dreams, forever.

And we'll all help mightily with bright plans for this Christmas.

Begum Shah Nawaz Speaks Informally To Guests at Tea

The much-feted Begum Shah Nawaz, Indian woman leader, who is in Washington for a brief visit, was the guest of honor at a tea yesterday afternoon at the home of Sir George and Lady Sansom in Chevy Chase.

As on other similar occasions during her stay here, the Begum spoke informally to the assembled guests, answering questions on political and social problems of her country. A member of the legislative assembly of Punjab and head of the All-Indian Women's League, she is in the city before going to Montreal, where she will be one of her country's delegates to the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Included among those present at yesterday's affair were several members of the Society of Women Geographers, with which Lady Sansom is affiliated.

He's in the Army Now; His Dad Is M. G., He's K. P.

Pvt. Robert S. Harmon, Rookie, is Son Of Commanding General of 2d Armored Division

The fact that his father is commanding general of the Second Armored Division, makes little difference in the Army life of Pvt. Robert S. Harmon.

Rookie Harmon, son of Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon, is stationed at the Armored Force Replacement Training Center in Fort Knox, Ky., where he formerly lived when his father was serving with the First Cavalry, then with the First Armored Corps and later with Armored Force Headquarters as chief of staff under Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers.

But on his return visit he is living a different sort of life. He does KP duty, holds his breath when the top sergeant looks for dust in the barracks, and hopes . . . as many another recruit does . . . that eventually he can make the grade at Armored Force Officer Candidate School.

Just turned 20, Private Harmon, enlisted in the Army a short while ago. A freshman at Alabama Polytechnic Institute at the time, he chose his father's branch of the service and began his training at Fort Knox.

However, if he had any notions as to concealing his relationship to General Harmon, he was mistaken. Old-time sergeants immediately recognized the name and asked the rookie if he was "General Ernie's son?"

U. S., Brazil Reach Trade Agreement

The United States and Brazil have reached an understanding which will enable the South American Republic to secure assurance of receiving essential products from this country without interfering with our production program, it was learned yesterday.

The new engagement worked out by the Departments of State and Commerce and the Board of Economic Warfare is expected to be a pattern for agreements with other Latin American countries.

Brazil, along with other United Nations, is required to assemble data on its requirements and resources for the next 18 months, to enable this country to do necessary overall planning. The agreement will provide machinery for the systematic filling of these requirements, with most important items getting top priority.

New "preference requests" which would be approved jointly by the export-import division of the Bank of Brazil and the American mission in Rio de Janeiro are provided in the agreement, covering ratings A, B, and C as follows:

Class B—Orders relating to keeping up essential governmental services.

Requirements would be rated in Brazil. Export licenses would be denied rated items only when specific war necessity dictates that action.

Brazilian officials have agreed to make every effort to conserve shipping space and to try to buy from other countries materials which the United States is short of.

Air Staff Officer 'Missing in Action'

Jury Finds Moslem Head Evaded Draft

Gulam Bogans, 43, Negro Moslem leader, known among his followers as Elijah Mohammed, was found guilty in District Court yesterday of draft evasion after a jury had deliberated only five minutes. Bogans had testified that he was a "citizen of the universe" and that members of the "Nation of Islam" were opposed to armed aggression.

Immediately after Bogan's conviction, his Washington lieutenant, David Jones, 41, went on trial on similar charges, with witnesses testifying to a scheme to unite American Negroes with the Japanese.

Tell Fanastic Tale

Three Negro witnesses unfolded a fantastic story of how Jones advocated antiwar activity. More than a score of Negro women, clad in bright colored satin robes and headdresses, sat in the courtroom.

Assistant United States Attorney John L. Lasky, who prosecuted the case against Bogans, opened the second trial with assertions before the jury that Jones had preached insistently against the war to crowds in a store in the 1500 block of Ninth Street Northwest.

The prosecutor quoted Jones as saying "Japan has been given the job of destroying the devils, and the Pearl Harbor attack is part of the carrying out of it."

Policeman Made Contact

Raymond N. Weaver, Negro policeman, testified that he worked his way into the organization under the guise of sympathy with its principles and subsequently came in close contact with Moslem "higher-ups."

According to Weaver, Jones claimed the Japanese possessed a huge stratosphere ship housing a small fleet of planes and capable of dropping bombs with a destruction radius of 50 miles. Jones, the policeman testified, described Americans as "blue-eyed" devils who eventually would be exterminated by the Japanese.

Others testifying for the Government were Davis W. Board, a student and the Rev. S. Geriah Lamkin. The trial, before Justice Bolitha J. Laws, will be resumed Monday.

Rights Violated, Rail Union Charges

The Order of Railway Conductors, claiming more than 1,000 members yesterday filed an injunction suit in District Court charging the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen with violating its rights as agent in the negotiation of working conditions for road conductors.

The petition asked the court to issue an order enjoining the railroad from continuing negotiations with the B. R. T. in regard to conductors who were added to the roads because of increased traffic arising out of the war emergency.

Also named defendant in the suit was the Baltimore & Eastern Railroad Co., a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania.

The plaintiff union claimed it was an "accredited representative of the class and craft of road conductors," and had the exclusive right as bargaining agent for the conductors.

On April 18, 1941, both unions were notified by the Pennsylvania Railroad that the company wished to effect certain changes in a schedule of conditions that had been formulated in 1927 between the company and the associations. In August of this year, the petition said, the railroad concluded an agreement with B. R. T. following a temporary suspension of conferences between officials of the two unions.

This agreement, O.R.C. contends, violates the Railway Labor Act, because it was not made with an accredited bargaining agent.

Specifically, O. R. C. charges that the railroad conspired with B. R. T. to "embarrass, discredit, and weaken" the O. R. C. through a "private and secret agreement" creating a class of conductors to be known as "assistant conductors." This action, the petition set forth, constituted an "invasion of the jurisdictional province and representative rights of the O. R. C.

The O. R. C. said it believed that in September the B. R. T. had filed a petition with th National Labor Relations Board requesting that it be designated the accredited representative of the conductors.

Plaintiffs in the suit are O. R. C., H. W. Fraser, O. R. T. president, who has offices at 10 Independence Avenue Southwest, B. C. Johnson, vice president, and C. E. Kalkman and J. E. Magill, committee chairmen.

Roosevelt Buys First $1000 Bond Of Victory Loan

President Roosevelt yesterday purchased from Secretary Morgenthau the first $1000 bond in the Victory Loan drive which the Treasury will launch next Monday to raise nine billion dollars in December.

The transaction took place at a White House ceremony.

The President's bond is part of the new issue of 2½ per cent, 26-year securities to go on public sale November 30. Denominations in this issue run from $500 to $100,000.

Draft Board Edict: Carry Cards in '43

In a move described as the first step in a Nation-wide roundup of draft dodgers, Selective Service headquarters yesterday ordered that starting January 1, all registrants must carry their draft classification cards with them at all times.

Spokesmen said frankly that headquarters was going to get tough. Starting with the first of the year, every man between 18 and 65 will either be in uniform or have in his possession an official card showing his draft status as of a recent date, they said.

One of Editor's Duties Has Habit Of Repeating

Nahunta, Ga., Nov. 25 (AP).—Uncle Sam asked, and Editor Carl Broome of the Brantley Enterprise, a weekly newspaper, answered—in detail.

Filling out an occupational questionnaire for selective service he gave his duties as:

"I write news, editorials, advertisements, keep books, pay bills, read proof, clean type, set headlines, set advertisements, set news and editorials, pay bills, set jobs, feed press, cut paper, wrap bundles, solicit advertising, solicit subscriptions, pay bills, repair presses and linotype (jackleg repairing), splice belts, saw metal cuts, pay bills, chisel cuts, make-up newspaper, order supplies, tell people where the local draft board is, tell others where the town's lawyers might be, tell still others that silly rumor they were excited about was only a silly rumor, pay bills, wash forms, distribute type, solicit job printing, pacify irate subscribers whose paper failed to arrive, pay bills, edit bungled copy, collect bills, pay bills, sort mail, scan the exchanges and maybe clip an item. Then in my spare time, I hunt and fish and play checkers."

'The Doughgirls' Also Will Premiere at the National

New Max Gordon Comedy Opens Here Dec. 7; A Seasoned Director Comes to the Capital; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE SEASON of legitimate drama really is getting into its stride. Considerable wordage has been spilled here and elsewhere concerning the premiere of Katharine Cornell's production of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," at the National next Monday night, and as long ago as yesterday morning something appeared in this space relative to the Guild's disclosure of "The Russian People" on the same stage the week of December 14. In between will come another one in which interest should be as acute.

MAX GORDON

Away back yonder on Tuesday Mr. John Peter Toohey whizzed into town as tidings-spreader for "The Doughgirls," a nimble exercise in frivolity, dedicated to "the comic spirit on a lark in wartime Washington," which will animate the National's stage the week of December 7, "immediately prior to its Broadway opening," as Mr. Toohey so quaintly puts it.

This frolic, which its stentor has figured out is only the second play to deal with Washington life since Jane Cowl's memorable "First Lady," has its locale in a smart Washington luxury hotel, where one palatial suite is overcrowded with the amorous and economic misadventures of a trio of not too Puritanical young women intent on "saving the Nation," or something. Official male Washington, one is given to understand, is not locked out.

Theodore Lohmeyer, manager of the Warner Brothers' Avalon Theater, walked off with the $25 war bond offered as first prize for the house manager who collected the greatest poundage at the Scrap Metal Matinees held in 43 local theaters on the morning of November 14. Mr. Lohmeyer piled up 5200 pounds out at his house. The bond was presented this week by Horace Walker, secretary of the District of Columbia Salvage Committee, and John J. Payette and Carter T. Barron, cochairmen of the District of Columbia War Activities Committee.

Concerning Mr. Askin's Successor

Born February 5, 1891, in Berlin, Mr. Schindler, a recent caller at this desk, since 1910, after graduating from the Reinhardt Seminar for Dramatics in Berlin, has been continuously engaged in the theater as both actor and stage director and has had contact with the opera as regisseur. His first important engagement was at the Court Theater of Karlsruhe-Baden, with further engagements in Leipsig, Hamburg, Berlin and Vienna. At the suggestion of Bruno Walter, after having been his assistant at the Staedtische Opera-Berlin, he was appointed stage director for the opera at Dusseldorf, later occupying a similar capacity in Prague, serving simultaneously as professor of dramatic opera instruction at the State Feutsche Akademie fur Musik und Darstellende Kunst, at Prague.

In 1937, he became a Czecho-Slovakian citizen, fleeing to Italy one leap ahead of the Nazis, where he was held prisoner in a concentration camp until he could secure a visa for entry into this country. It is his opinion based on personal observation that an American invasion of Italy would be welcomed with cheers and rejoicing by the Italian people.

Mr. Schindler's first production at King-Smith, he says, will be in the nature of a New Year's innovation which he hopes will attract Washington's favor. The cast will not be restricted to members of the school's enrollment, but will seek to enlist the services of the best actors resident in the Capital. Owing to the prevalent "man shortage" half a dozen male roles or so remain open. Those interested are urged to apply Sunday afternoons or Wednesday and Friday nights, during rehearsal periods at the Playhouse, or by phone to Mr. Schindler at AD. 0871.

Boy, have we got sweethearts! Last week the 16 Earle Roxyettes were invited to attend the Army Air Force dance at Bolling Field as guests of the Signal Corps. No sooner had they arrived than Capt. John Grahn surprised them with the announcement that the boys at the field had selected them as the "Sweethearts of the Signal Corps." And all one of Lynn Allison, winning new admirers singing the tunes in the George M. Cohan overture at Loew's Capitol this week, now wears the proud title of "Sweetheart of Fort Washington." No wonder our armed forces are renowned as the smartest in the world!

Tonight, in Alumni Hall, Westminster, Md., the Western Maryland College Players will present the James Thurber-Elliott Nugent comedy, "The Male Animal" as their annual Thanksgiving production. The student cast will be under the direction of Miss Esther Smith, professor of dramatic arts. Margaret L. (Peggy) Wilson of Baltimore and Joseph Whiteford of Chevy Chase will be seen in the principal roles. Both have had experience as members of summer and little theater groups.

In-View-of-What-You-Paid-for-It Note

In Mama's Footsteps

Another "junior" follows in the footsteps of a famous parent, when Hazel Dawn, 14, wins a role with Virginia Weidler in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Youngest Profession."

The young actress is the daughter of Hazel Dawn, one of the most successful musical comedy stars of yesteryear.

Scoring in the Hit of Her Life!

JUDY GARLAND,

who adds unsuspected power as an emotional actress to her known charm as a youthful singing comedienne in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "For Me and My Gal," which today enters its second overflow week at Loew's Palace Theater. George Murphy, Gene Kelly and Marta Eggerth lead the splendid supporting cast, with Ben Blue for the more obvious comedy

HEDDA HOPPER

'Hello, Sucker!'

ALAN LADD

The story, written by Claude Binyon before he went into the Army, will deal chiefly with Texas' earlier days in New York. Alan plays a hard-boiled guy with a heart of gold, who was her heart interest at that time.

After all the unofficial casting that's been done on "Lady in the Dark," here's the dope straight from headquarters. As you know, Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland, Warner Baxter, MacDonald Carey and Mischa Auer are definitely set. Phyllis Brooks gets the Alison Dubois part, for which Ilka Chase was considered. Nobody's been decided on yet for the "Hunk O' Man" and Maggie Grant parts.

George Balanchine will stage the ballet numbers and Billy Dahiel the modern dance routines. Billy and his partner, Mary Parker, come direct from "Let's Face It," on Broadway, arriving on the 28th, and Mary has a part in the picture. Don Loper does one dance routine.

Garbo continues her lonely daily walks in Central Park . . . Dolores Del Rio is leaving for Hollywood any minute now to visit her mother, who lives next door to Dolores' former husband, Cedric Gibbons. Dolores claims there's nothing to the rumor that she 'll get together, but she still adores him . . . Lili Damita's still trying to get into a New York play . . . Gloria Swanson may do a play for Gregory Ratoff if he gets time off from Hollywood . . . Gypsy Rose Lee and new husband, Alexander Kirkland, are now living apart.

Jerome Zerbe, society's pet photographer, now in the Navy and transferred to the Pacific Coast, is the house guest of Ina Claire in San Francisco.

When Marjorie Reynolds was doing Westerns, her one ambition was to dress up in pictures. Now in "Dixie," she's all dolled up in 1850 finery—and wishing she were back in Westerns, 'cause she's laced so tightly she can't breathe, and can't sit down for fear of wrinkling her ruffles!

Deanna Durbin will speak to the A. E. F. forces in England on Christmas Day. She took time out from "Forever Yours" to make a recording for the USO, which will be sent over there.

Joel McCrea made his longest screen speech in 14 years the other day for "Merry Go Round" when he took 7 minutes and 12 seconds (and a whole reel of film) telling Jean Arthur he loved her.

Little

A lot of know-it-alls wagged their heads sadly and many were the pessimists who held their collective breaths when Producer David O. Selznick first announced that he would make a picture dealing with Hollywood, itself. To confound the experts thoroughly, "A Star Is Born" not only went on to win the Academy Award for 1937 but probably did more to put the film industry in a favorable light than any other picture that dealt with the same sacred topic.

The last five years have done much to dispel the aura of glamour that surrounds the film capital. Moving picture people are generally known as a hard-working group of actors who earn every cent of their fabulous salaries. Well, almost. Gone from the scene are the actors who were best known for their fur-lined swimming pools and wild parties. Still, 'A Star Is Born" remains an excellent film and a tribute to the most popular medium of entertainment today.

Perhaps this is because its theme is so universal. There isn't a town in the country that hasn't had its quota of "Esther Blodgetts"—girls who looked at the starry skies on winter nights and wished for the fame and fortune of Hollywood. This Cinderella tale is not, though, without its undertones of tragedy. With the success of her career, Esther Blodgett tastes the bitterness of life, when her husband, whose popularity as an actor passes into oblivion, takes his life rather than be a burden to his wife.

Janet Gaynor portrays the girl who became a nation's favorite, and her performance only emphasizes the loss which became Hollywood's when she retired. Fredric March is excellent as Norman Maine, the star who drank his way down. The supporting cast, all equally good, includes Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander.

Pix

That great old fellow with the lovable philosophy, Grandpa Vanderhof, is back again in a Pix Theater revival of the Kaufman and Hart story which won the pulitzer prize on the stage, and as a film walked off with the Academy Award.

As entertainment for Thanksgiving "You Can't Take It With You is unsurpassed. It also serves to remind us that if a certain gent of Austrian ancestry had been imbued with just a little of the Vanderhof-Sycamore spirit the world might be a better place today.

The story, as you of course recall, deals with a household in New York whose members believe in living first and worrying later. It all begins when Grandpa, played to perfection by Lionel Barrymore, realizes that he hasn't enjoyed his life as much as he wanted to and so he ups and quits his job to follow his hobbies of harmonica playing and stamp collecting, with the whole family following suit.

The house becomes a haven for icemen, sculptors, inventors and even ballet teachers. Naturally you couldn't expect a business-conscious world to understand them and when daughter Jean Arthur meets a banker's son there is a clash between the two schools of thought. You are allowed one guess to pick the winner.

Only four years old the picture is dated by nothing older than the Big Apple. Remember? Jean Arthur is the lovely ingenue while Jimmy Stewart scored one of his biggest hits as Tony Kirby. Edward Arnold is the stiff-shirted banker and the other contributors to the hilarious doings include Spring Byington, Mischa Auer, Ann Miller, Samuel S. Hinds, Donald Meek, H. B. Warner, Halliwell Hobbes, Dub Taylor and Eddie Anderson.

Wartime Traffic

Because the period of Preston Sturges' "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" is 1942 wartime, street traffic is made up of autos, horse-drawn vehicles and citizens on bicycles all at the same time.

RKO-Keith's

When the last vestige of that sumptuous turkey and all the trimmin's has been stowed away and you're lazily thinking of an effortless way to work off the surplus poundage, you might bundle up the family and trundle down to RKO-Keith's, where Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are supplying all the necessary exercises for satiated diners in the form of a large order of abdominal laughs.

Now in its second week, "Who Done It?" finds the hilarious pair engaged in solving a murder which takes place in a broadcasting studio. Needless to say, they run the gamut of many riotous routines before extricating themselves from unhappy situations of their own making and placing the finger of guilt on the proper party.

Washington Report

New York, Nov. 25.

When Wendell Willkie was in Moscow, Stalin told him of the progress made in eliminating illiteracy there. "Before the revolution, 96 per cent of the people in Russia were illiterates," said Stalin. "Then we instituted an educational program. Every year we increased that program, and now only 2 per cent of the people are illiterates" . . . "If you're not careful," was the Willkie answer which drew hearty laughter from Stalin, "you'll educate yourself right out of a job."

CLARE BOOTHE

Mike Cowles, the Des Moines publisher who accompanied Willkie on that trip, told his friends about the small city in Siberia where their plane came down for refueling. This was the city of Yakutsk, with a population of less than 50,000. But the Public Library there had more than 550,000 books . . . Cowles told Barnet Nover of The Washington Post, that when he returned to Des Moines he learned that the Public Library in his home city had only 400,000 books . . . "But that's not a fair comparison," said Nover. "The Des Moines books don't include 'Government Reports.'"

Clare Boothe may go to the Solomons before she takes her place in the House of Representatives . . . There will be a new chairman of the War Manpower Commission soon, replacing Paul V. McNutt . . . When Governor Lehman assumes his new post as Director of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, he will work in the State Dept. . . . The commutation hearing in behalf of the doomed Lepke will be decided by Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, who will become governor on Dec. 3. Poletti already is studying the documents in the case . . . The President is about to appoint a Food Distributor. His title won't be "Food Administrator." He's a noted American who is not a politician. He's not an Easterner. His appointment will please the farmers.

David L. Podell, the noted N. Y. lawyer who now is supervising the Small War Plants section for Thurman Arnold, was asked about the difference between the American and Nazi systems of dealing with the small war plants. "In Germany," said Podell, "the government gives a contract to a small manufacturer at a price which makes it impossible for him to make any profit. Then his contract is renegotiated, and his loss is adjusted. Our system is exactly the opposite. Here we first give him a big profit, and then adjust it . . . Our system is preferable."

Last week, for the first time in the four years since he became a Supreme Court justice, Bill Douglas heard a lawyer begin his address to the court, "Gentlemen," instead of the customary, "If it please the court." Justice Douglas turned to Justice Jackson and whispered: "I'll settle for that" . . . It was Justice Douglas, incidentally, who told Henry Kaiser of his bet that Kaiser would build the cargo planes a year and a half ahead of the three-year schedule. "Can't be done." Kaiser insisted. The jurist said that his bet, nevertheless, would stand. Kaiser phoned his shipyard and began: "Now, on those cargo planes, I got a new idea. Let's try it this way . . ."

Ralph William Close, the Minister from the Union of South Africa, tells of the day when he first arrived here. The first question asked him by the American reporters was: "What do you think of Mae West?" . . . "What should I think," Close answered, "of he, she or it?" . . . He never had heard of Mae West—nor of her assertion, the day before, that she never would appear in public unless she was wearing at least $10,000 worth of jewelry . . . "And now that I look back upon it," Mr. Close now reminisces, "the question was appropriate. Because a week later all the South African diamond mines closed down."

Top Musical A Second Week At the Palace

The element of surprise is totally lacking from the announcement that "For Me and My Gal" is continuing a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. It would be present only had this extraordinarily entertaining film not been held over.

With Judy Garland, George Murphy, Gene Kelly, Marte Eggerth, Ben Blue, and numerous others lending their varied and, in some instances, expanded talents to a romantic story of nostalgic as well as deep present interest, "For Me and My Gal" represents a rare combination of virtues that were bound to make it a top boxoffice hit. It revives memories of vaudeville in its heyday, resuscitates a baker's dozen of the most-popular tunes that had the country humming and whistling between the years of 1916 and 1919, and pursues a dramatic course of sufficient substance to register soundly without musical embellishment. Alive with comedy, it also indulges an occasional tug at the heartstrings, as the saying goes.

It is this last quality that reveals Judy Garland as as fine a young emotional actress as she is singing comedienne. In the two leading male roles, the Messrs. Murphy and Kelly provide a brace of players who can act as well as they can dance and better than they can sing—which is plenty well enough for present purposes. For high vocal entertainment, the picture has Marta Eggerth, not seen on the native screen since her long-ago, occasional appearances in films of foreign production. A real star.

To repeat, "For Me and My Gal" has everything — including the same bill of short reels that supplemented it last week.

Many Film Celebs Born in October

Birthdays galore mark October in Hollywood, with seven of the screen's top personalities celebrating their natal days during that month.

M-G-M actresses Spring Byington and Marsha Hunt both had birthdays on October 17. Laraine Day's natal day was the 13th, while Ruth Hussey was born October 30. Mervyn LeRoy, top filmland director, celebrated October 15, while Director Robert Z. Leonard observed the seventh of the month as his birth date.

DeGaulle Radio Quits in Protest At Darlan Deal

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 25.—The voice of Fighting France which has broadcast hope and encouragement to France daily since June, 1940, quit the air tonight in protest against the American deal with Admiral Jean Darlan in North Africa, a measure of expediency with which the British Government indicated it was content until the campaign there is finished.

Foreign Secretary Eden earlier in the day told Commons that this is not the time to "discuss arrangements made in North Africa between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower (American commander of the entire North African operation) and local French authorities."

Then the Fighting French military spokesman, who must remain unidentified because of relatives in France, said:

"As long as Darlan is retained as the head in North Africa I feel I cannot conscientiously continue."

Difficult to Explain

"It is not possible for me to make the appointment of Darlan clear to the French people. I have confidence, however, that the unhappy position in North Africa finally will be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned."

The spokesman's action also followed closely upon the British cancellation of the speech planned for last Saturday by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Of de Gaulle's canceled speech, Eden said that "the Prime Minister (Churchill) and I did not think its delivery at this particular time would be helpful to the extremely tense and serious operations now proceeding in Tunisia."

In Fullest Agreement

Eden signified Britain's "fullest agreement" with President Roosevelt's statement of November 17 describing the Eisenhower-Darlan agreement as a "temporary expedient." Eden also discouraged any discussion of the North African political arrangements for the present.

However, eleven of the persistent critics of the Churchill government introduced in Commons a motion disapproving the United States dealings with Darlan. The eleven, including Laborites Aneurin Bevan and R. J. Davies, Conservatives Robert J. G. Boothby and Richard C. Stokes, and Liberals Edgar L. Granville and T. L. Horabin, will try to obtain a House vote; but they never have shaken the government's hold in the House.

Eden further told the House that the British government would stand by its engagements with De Gaulle and there was some indication that the Fighting French would accept the Darlan position on the same basis as the United States and Britain—a temporary expedient justified by military necessities.

Meanwhile, the French radio broadcast a Vichy admiralty communique that 12 ships were put out of action at Casablanca, including the battleship Jean Bart and the cruiser Primauget, both beached and damaged in the operations opposing the Americans.

Couple Found Dead; Double Murder Hinted

Coburg, Ont., Nov. 25 (Canadian Press).—A man and an attractive woman were found shot to death in a ditch 4 miles west of Cobourg today in what police believed to be a double murder.

Police identified the man as Wallace Cunningham, about 45, of Toronto. The woman, about 30, was unidentified. Police found no gun.

Monopoly Charged In U. S. Indictment Of A. & P. Tea Co.

The Justice Department announced yesterday an indictment at Dallas, Tex., charging the New York Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., Inc., and 11 subsidiaries—described as the Nation's largest buyers, makers and sellers of food—with conspiring to monopolize trade and commerce in food and food products.

Also named defendants were 16 officials of the various companies, and Business Organizations, Inc., of New York, and Carl Byoir of New York, its president.

The indictment was in two counts, each carrying a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and $5000 fine.

A statement issued last night by Carl Byoir and associates for the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., declared that "we will disprove every charge" made and charged that the Justice Department's antitrust division was declared "a domestic war on efficient distribution" of food.

Canada Adamant on Lumber Exports, Alexander Asserts

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Ben Alexander, WPB lumber coordinator, yesterday told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that it would take "a bigger brass hat than I've got" to make Canada relax an embargo against logs into this country for use in the war effort.

Alexander reported his office was still negotiating to get some logs after Senator Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington, a committee member, declared several times during the hearing that the WPB ought to "get a little bit tough about the whole thing."

Tough, but No Logs

"We've been tough," said Alexander. "We've talked just as tough as you are talking, and we haven't got any logs."

Wallgren, following up complaints of Northwest lumber operators, protested that American firms had bought timber in Canada but were prevented by the embargo from bringing it to their mills in this country.

He explained later that the logs involved included quantities of large timber of the type needed to replace steel in heavy construction, while other witnesses testified that shortages of logs, rather than shortages of mill facilities, were a primary threat to war lumber production.

Offered Third of '43 Output

Despite admitted need for the Canadian logs, Alexander testified that at his last meeting with Allan Nicholson, deputy timber controller of Canada, the latter refused to do anything about the embargo on logs, offering instead a third of Canada's 1943 output of lumber. The deal was accepted, said Alexander, but later Canadian officials moved to reduce this lumber quota.

Besides the Canadian tie-up, Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton pressed for an explanation of delay in drafting details of a Forest Service proposal for a hundred million dollar revolving fund for reopening of saw mills.

Alexander reported that the plan, after six months of negotiation between WPB lumber officials and the Forest Service, had recently been approved by the WPB over his own opposition and placed on the President's desk. He declared, however, that the plan would mean piling another Government agency above existing facilities, and spending "another hundred million dollars of the taxpayers' money to produce a type of wood not needed in the war effort."

Fulton and another committee member, Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine, asked E. G. Wakeham, director of the pulp and paper branch of the WPB, to furnish information about a list of essential pulp uses which reportedly had omitted newsprint. Wakeham said he did not know of such a list, but added that in his belief "newsprint is certainly essential."

Cramer to Hear Treason Sentence On December 2

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Sentencing of Anthony Cramer, 42-year-old Yorkville mechanic convicted of treason for aiding two of eight Nazi saboteurs landed in the United States by submarine last June, was postponed until December 2 by Federal Judge W. Goddard today.

Cramer, who faces a maximum penalty of death, was convicted of helping Werner Thiel and Edward J. Kerling, saboteurs sent by Germany to destroy units of the Nation's aluminum industry. Both Thiel and Kerling were put to death after trial by a military court in Washington.

Meanwhile, testimony was presented today at the treason trial of Helmut Leiner, 33-year-old gardener, that he expected to receive the golden insignia, one of the highest awards of the Nazi Party in Germany and rarely granted to a civilian.

'The Doughgirls' Also Will Premiere at the National

New Max Gordon Comedy Opens Here Dec. 7; A Seasoned Director Comes to the Capital; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE SEASON of legitimate drama really is getting into its stride. Considerable wordage has been spilled here and elsewhere concerning the premiere of Katharine Cornell's production of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," at the National next Monday night, and as long ago as yesterday morning something appeared in this space relative to the Guild's disclosure of "The Russian People" on the same stage the week of December 14. In between will come another one in which interest should be as acute.

MAX GORDON

Away back yonder on Tuesday Mr. John Peter Toohey whizzed into town as tidings-spreader for "The Doughgirls," a nimble exercise in frivolity, dedicated to "the comic spirit on a lark in wartime Washington," which will animate the National's stage the week of December 7, "immediately prior to its Broadway opening," as Mr. Toohey so quaintly puts it.

This frolic, which its stentor has figured out is only the second play to deal with Washington life since Jane Cowl's memorable "First Lady," has its locale in a smart Washington luxury hotel, where one palatial suite is overcrowded with the amorous and economic misadventures of a trio of not too Puritanical young women intent on "saving the Nation," or something. Official male Washington, one is given to understand, is not locked out.

Theodore Lohmeyer, manager of the Warner Brothers' Avalon Theater, walked off with the $25 war bond offered as first prize for the house manager who collected the greatest poundage at the Scrap Metal Matinees held in 43 local theaters on the morning of November 14. Mr. Lohmeyer piled up 5200 pounds out at his house. The bond was presented this week by Horace Walker, secretary of the District of Columbia Salvage Committee, and John J. Payette and Carter T. Barron, cochairmen of the District of Columbia War Activities Committee.

Concerning Mr. Askin's Successor

Born February 5, 1891, in Berlin, Mr. Schindler, a recent caller at this desk, since 1910, after graduating from the Reinhardt Seminar for Dramatics in Berlin, has been continuously engaged in the theater as both actor and stage director and has had contact with the opera as regisseur. His first important engagement was at the Court Theater of Karlsruhe-Baden, with further engagements in Leipsig, Hamburg, Berlin and Vienna. At the suggestion of Bruno Walter, after having been his assistant at the Staedtische Opera-Berlin, he was appointed stage director for the opera at Dusseldorf, later occupying a similar capacity in Prague, serving simultaneously as professor of dramatic opera instruction at the State Feutsche Akademie fur Musik und Darstellende Kunst, at Prague.

In 1937, he became a Czecho-Slovakian citizen, fleeing to Italy one leap ahead of the Nazis, where he was held prisoner in a concentration camp until he could secure a visa for entry into this country. It is his opinion based on personal observation that an American invasion of Italy would be welcomed with cheers and rejoicing by the Italian people.

Mr. Schindler's first production at King-Smith, he says, will be in the nature of a New Year's innovation which he hopes will attract Washington's favor. The cast will not be restricted to members of the school's enrollment, but will seek to enlist the services of the best actors resident in the Capital. Owing to the prevalent "man shortage" half a dozen male roles or so remain open. Those interested are urged to apply Sunday afternoons or Wednesday and Friday nights, during rehearsal periods at the Playhouse, or by phone to Mr. Schindler at AD. 0871.

Boy, have we got sweethearts! Last week the 16 Earle Roxyettes were invited to attend the Army Air Force dance at Bolling Field as guests of the Signal Corps. No sooner had they arrived than Capt. John Grahn surprised them with the announcement that the boys at the field had selected them as the "Sweethearts of the Signal Corps." And all one of Lynn Allison, winning new admirers singing the tunes in the George M. Cohan overture at Loew's Capitol this week, now wears the proud title of "Sweetheart of Fort Washington." No wonder our armed forces are renowned as the smartest in the world!

Tonight, in Alumni Hall, Westminster, Md., the Western Maryland College Players will present the James Thurber-Elliott Nugent comedy, "The Male Animal" as their annual Thanksgiving production. The student cast will be under the direction of Miss Esther Smith, professor of dramatic arts. Margaret L. (Peggy) Wilson of Baltimore and Joseph Whiteford of Chevy Chase will be seen in the principal roles. Both have had experience as members of summer and little theater groups.

In-View-of-What-You-Paid-for-It Note

In Mama's Footsteps

Another "junior" follows in the footsteps of a famous parent, when Hazel Dawn, 14, wins a role with Virginia Weidler in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Youngest Profession."

The young actress is the daughter of Hazel Dawn, one of the most successful musical comedy stars of yesteryear.

JUDY GARLAND,

who adds unsuspected power as an emotional actress to her known charm as a youthful singing comedienne in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "For Me and My Gal," which today enters its second overflow week at Loew's Palace Theater. George Murphy, Gene Kelly and Marta Eggerth lead the splendid supporting cast, with Ben Blue for the more obvious comedy

HEDDA HOPPER

'Hello, Sucker!'

ALAN LADD

The story, written by Claude Binyon before he went into the Army, will deal chiefly with Texas' earlier days in New York. Alan plays a hard-boiled guy with a heart of gold, who was her heart interest at that time.

After all the unofficial casting that's been done on "Lady in the Dark," here's the dope straight from headquarters. As you know, Ginger Rogers, Ray Milland, Warner Baxter, MacDonald Carey and Mischa Auer are definitely set. Phyllis Brooks gets the Alison Dubois part, for which Ilka Chase was considered. Nobody's been decided on yet for the "Hunk O' Man" and Maggie Grant parts.

George Balanchine will stage the ballet numbers and Billy Dahiel the modern dance routines. Billy and his partner, Mary Parker, come direct from "Let's Face It," on Broadway, arriving on the 28th, and Mary has a part in the picture. Don Loper does one dance routine.

Garbo continues her lonely daily walks in Central Park . . . Dolores Del Rio is leaving for Hollywood any minute now to visit her mother, who lives next door to Dolores' former husband, Cedric Gibbons. Dolores claims there's nothing to the rumor that she 'll get together, but she still adores him . . . Lili Damita's still trying to get into a New York play . . . Gloria Swanson may do a play for Gregory Ratoff if he gets time off from Hollywood . . . Gypsy Rose Lee and new husband, Alexander Kirkland, are now living apart.

Jerome Zerbe, society's pet photographer, now in the Navy and transferred to the Pacific Coast, is the house guest of Ina Claire in San Francisco.

When Marjorie Reynolds was doing Westerns, her one ambition was to dress up in pictures. Now in "Dixie," she's all dolled up in 1850 finery—and wishing she were back in Westerns, 'cause she's laced so tightly she can't breathe, and can't sit down for fear of wrinkling her ruffles!

Deanna Durbin will speak to the A. E. F. forces in England on Christmas Day. She took time out from "Forever Yours" to make a recording for the USO, which will be sent over there.

Incidentally, when 76-year-old Harry Davenport ran up a flight of stairs for the eighth time for a scene in that picture, Producer-Director Bruce Manning, amazed at his sprightliness, said, "There's the spirit of '76 for you!"

Joel McCrea made his longest screen speech in 14 years the other day for "Merry Go Round" when he took 7 minutes and 12 seconds (and a whole reel of film) telling Jean Arthur he loved her.

Little

A lot of know-it-alls wagged their heads sadly and many were the pessimists who held their collective breaths when Producer David O. Selznick first announced that he would make a picture dealing with Hollywood, itself. To confound the experts thoroughly, "A Star Is Born" not only went on to win the Academy Award for 1937 but probably did more to put the film industry in a favorable light than any other picture that dealt with the same sacred topic.

The last five years have done much to dispel the aura of glamour that surrounds the film capital. Moving picture people are generally known as a hard-working group of actors who earn every cent of their fabulous salaries. Well, almost. Gone from the scene are the actors who were best known for their fur-lined swimming pools and wild parties. Still, 'A Star Is Born" remains an excellent film and a tribute to the most popular medium of entertainment today.

Perhaps this is because its theme is so universal. There isn't a town in the country that hasn't had its quota of "Esther Blodgetts"—girls who looked at the starry skies on winter nights and wished for the fame and fortune of Hollywood. This Cinderella tale is not, though, without its undertones of tragedy. With the success of her career, Esther Blodgett tastes the bitterness of life, when her husband, whose popularity as an actor passes into oblivion, takes his life rather than be a burden to his wife.

Done completely in Technicolor, the Little Theater revival offers a fine insight into the making of a picture. A cameraman photographs a cameraman, a director directs a director, and every phase of production is truthfully recorded.

Janet Gaynor portrays the girl who became a nation's favorite, and her performance only emphasizes the loss which became Hollywood's when she retired. Fredric March is excellent as Norman Maine, the star who drank his way down. The supporting cast, all equally good, includes Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander.

Pix

That great old fellow with the lovable philosophy, Grandpa Vanderhof, is back again in a Pix Theater revival of the Kaufman and Hart story which won the pulitzer prize on the stage, and as a film walked off with the Academy Award.

As entertainment for Thanksgiving "You Can't Take It With You is unsurpassed. It also serves to remind us that if a certain gent of Austrian ancestry had been imbued with just a little of the Vanderhof-Sycamore spirit the world might be a better place today.

The story, as you of course recall, deals with a household in New York whose members believe in living first and worrying later. It all begins when Grandpa, played to perfection by Lionel Barrymore, realizes that he hasn't enjoyed his life as much as he wanted to and so he ups and quits his job to follow his hobbies of harmonica playing and stamp collecting, with the whole family following suit.

The house becomes a haven for icemen, sculptors, inventors and even ballet teachers. Naturally you couldn't expect a business-conscious world to understand them and when daughter Jean Arthur meets a banker's son there is a clash between the two schools of thought. You are allowed one guess to pick the winner.

Only four years old the picture is dated by nothing older than the Big Apple. Remember? Jean Arthur is the lovely ingenue while Jimmy Stewart scored one of his biggest hits as Tony Kirby. Edward Arnold is the stiff-shirted banker and the other contributors to the hilarious doings include Spring Byington, Mischa Auer, Ann Miller, Samuel S. Hinds, Donald Meek, H. B. Warner, Halliwell Hobbes, Dub Taylor and Eddie Anderson.

Freedom from inhibitions and complete unrestricted playing mark the direction of Frank Capra.

Wartime Traffic

Because the period of Preston Sturges' "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" is 1942 wartime, street traffic is made up of autos, horse-drawn vehicles and citizens on bicycles all at the same time.

RKO-Keith's

When the last vestige of that sumptuous turkey and all the trimmin's has been stowed away and you're lazily thinking of an effortless way to work off the surplus poundage, you might bundle up the family and trundle down to RKO-Keith's, where Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are supplying all the necessary exercises for satiated diners in the form of a large order of abdominal laughs.

Now in its second week, "Who Done It?" finds the hilarious pair engaged in solving a murder which takes place in a broadcasting studio. Needless to say, they run the gamut of many riotous routines before extricating themselves from unhappy situations of their own making and placing the finger of guilt on the proper party.

Washington Report

New York, Nov. 25.

When Wendell Willkie was in Moscow, Stalin told him of the progress made in eliminating illiteracy there. "Before the revolution, 96 per cent of the people in Russia were illiterates," said Stalin. "Then we instituted an educational program. Every year we increased that program, and now only 2 per cent of the people are illiterates" . . . "If you're not careful," was the Willkie answer which drew hearty laughter from Stalin, "you'll educate yourself right out of a job."

CLARE BOOTHE

Mike Cowles, the Des Moines publisher who accompanied Willkie on that trip, told his friends about the small city in Siberia where their plane came down for refueling. This was the city of Yakutsk, with a population of less than 50,000. But the Public Library there had more than 550,000 books . . . Cowles told Barnet Nover of The Washington Post, that when he returned to Des Moines he learned that the Public Library in his home city had only 400,000 books . . . "But that's not a fair comparison," said Nover. "The Des Moines books don't include 'Government Reports.'"

Clare Boothe may go to the Solomons before she takes her place in the House of Representatives . . . There will be a new chairman of the War Manpower Commission soon, replacing Paul V. McNutt . . . When Governor Lehman assumes his new post as Director of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, he will work in the State Dept. . . . The commutation hearing in behalf of the doomed Lepke will be decided by Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, who will become governor on Dec. 3. Poletti already is studying the documents in the case . . . The President is about to appoint a Food Distributor. His title won't be "Food Administrator." He's a noted American who is not a politician. He's not an Easterner. His appointment will please the farmers.

David L. Podell, the noted N. Y. lawyer who now is supervising the Small War Plants section for Thurman Arnold, was asked about the difference between the American and Nazi systems of dealing with the small war plants. "In Germany," said Podell, "the government gives a contract to a small manufacturer at a price which makes it impossible for him to make any profit. Then his contract is renegotiated, and his loss is adjusted. Our system is exactly the opposite. Here we first give him a big profit, and then adjust it . . . Our system is preferable."

Last week, for the first time in the four years since he became a Supreme Court justice, Bill Douglas heard a lawyer begin his address to the court, "Gentlemen," instead of the customary, "If it please the court." Justice Douglas turned to Justice Jackson and whispered: "I'll settle for that" . . . It was Justice Douglas, incidentally, who told Henry Kaiser of his bet that Kaiser would build the cargo planes a year and a half ahead of the three-year schedule. "Can't be done," Kaiser insisted. The jurist said that his bet, nevertheless, would stand. Kaiser phoned his shipyard and began: "Now, on those cargo planes, I got a new idea. Let's try it this way . . ."

Ralph William Close, the Minister from the Union of South Africa, tells of the day when he first arrived here. The first question asked him by the American reporters was: "What do you think of Mae West?" . . . "What should I think," Close answered, "of he, she or it?" . . . He never had heard of Mae West—nor of her assertion, the day before, that she never would appear in public unless she was wearing at least $10,000 worth of jewelry . . . "And now that I look back upon it," Mr. Close now reminisces, "the question was appropriate. Because a week later all the South African diamond mines closed down."

The element of surprise is totally lacking from the announcement that "For Me and My Gal" is continuing a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. It would be present only had this extraordinarily entertaining film not been held over.

With Judy Garland, George Murphy, Gene Kelly, Marta Eggerth, Ben Blue, and numerous others lending their varied and, in some instances, expanded talents to a romantic story of nostalgic as well as deep present interest, "For Me and My Gal" represents a rare combination of virtues that were bound to make it a top boxoffice hit. It revives memories of vaudeville in its heyday, resuscitates a baker's dozen of the most-popular tunes that had the country humming and whistling between the years of 1916 and 1919, and pursues a dramatic course of sufficient substance to register soundly without musical embellishment. Alive with comedy, it also indulges an occasional tug at the heartstrings, as the saying goes.

It is this last quality that reveals Judy Garland as as fine a young emotional actress as she is singing comedienne. In the two leading male roles, the Messrs. Murphy and Kelly provide a brace of players who can act as well as they can dance and better than they can sing—which is plenty well enough for present purposes. For high vocal entertainment, the picture has Marta Eggerth, not seen on the native screen since her long-ago, occasional appearances in films of foreign production. A real star.

To repeat, "For Me and My Gal" has everything — including the same bill of short reels that supplemented it last week.

Many Film Celebs Born in October

Birthdays galore mark October in Hollywood, with seven of the screen's top personalities celebrating their natal days during that month.

M-G-M actresses Spring Byington and Marsha Hunt both had birthdays on October 17. Laraine Day's natal day was the 13th, while Ruth Hussey was born October 30. Mervyn LeRoy, top filmland director, celebrated October 15, while Director Robert Z. Leonard observed the seventh of the month as his birth date.

DeGaulle Radio Quits in Protest At Darlan Deal

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 25.—The voice of Fighting France which has broadcast hope and encouragement to France daily since June, 1940, quit the air tonight in protest against the American deal with Admiral Jean Darlan in North Africa, a measure of expediency with which the British Government indicated it was content until the campaign there is finished.

Foreign Secretary Eden earlier in the day told Commons that this is not the time to "discuss arrangements made in North Africa between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower (American commander of the entire North African operation) and local French authorities."

Then the Fighting French military spokesman, who must remain unidentified because of relatives in France, said:

"As long as Darlan is retained as the head in North Africa I feel I cannot conscientiously continue."

Difficult to Explain

"It is not possible for me to make the appointment of Darlan clear to the French people. I have confidence, however, that the unhappy position in North Africa finally will be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned."

The spokesman's action also followed closely upon the British cancellation of the speech planned for last Saturday by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Of de Gaulle's canceled speech, Eden said that "the Prime Minister (Churchill) and I did not think its delivery at this particular time would be helpful to the extremely tense and serious operations now proceeding in Tunisia."

In Fullest Agreement

Eden signified Britain's "fullest agreement" with President Roosevelt's statement of November 17 describing the Eisenhower-Darlan agreement as a "temporary expedient." Eden also discouraged any discussion of the North African political arrangements for the present.

However, eleven of the persistent critics of the Churchill government introduced in Commons a motion disapproving the United States dealings with Darlan. The eleven, including Laborites Aneurin Bevan and R. J. Davies, Conservatives Robert J. G. Boothby and Richard C. Stokes, and Liberals Edgar L. Granville and T. L. Horabin, will try to obtain a House vote; but they never have shaken the government's hold in the House.

Eden further told the House that the British government would stand by its engagements with De Gaulle and there was some indication that the Fighting French would accept the Darlan position on the same basis as the United States and Britain—a temporary expedient justified by military necessities.

Meanwhile, the French radio broadcast a Vichy admiralty communique that 12 ships were put out of action at Casablanca, including the battleship Jean Bart and the cruiser Primauget, both beached and damaged in the operations opposing the Americans.

Monopoly Charged In U. S. Indictment Of A. & P. Tea Co.

The Justice Department announced yesterday an indictment at Dallas, Tex., charging the New York Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., Inc., and 11 subsidiaries—described as the Nation's largest buyers, makers and sellers of food—with conspiring to monopolize trade and commerce in food and food products.

Also named defendants were 16 officials of the various companies, and Business Organizations, Inc., of New York, and Carl Byoir of New York, its president.

The indictment was in two counts, each carrying a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and $5000 fine.

A statement issued last night by Carl Byoir and associates for the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., declared that "we will disprove every charge" made and charged that the Justice Department's antitrust division was declared "a domestic war on efficient distribution" of food.

Canada Adamant on Lumber Exports, Alexander Asserts

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Ben Alexander, WPB lumber coordinator, yesterday told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that it would take "a bigger brass hat than I've got" to make Canada relax an embargo against logs into this country for use in the war effort.

Alexander reported his office was still negotiating to get some logs after Senator Wallgren (Democrat) of Washington, a committee member, declared several times during the hearing that the WPB ought to "get a little bit tough about the whole thing."

Tough, but No Logs

"We've been tough," said Alexander. "We've talked just as tough as you are talking, and we haven't got any logs."

Wallgren, following up complaints of Northwest lumber operators, protested that American firms had bought timber in Canada but were prevented by the embargo from bringing it to their mills in this country.

He explained later that the logs involved included quantities of large timber of the type needed to replace steel in heavy construction, while other witnesses testified that shortages of logs, rather than shortages of mill facilities, were a primary threat to war lumber production.

Offered Third of '43 Output

Despite admitted need for the Canadian logs, Alexander testified that at his last meeting with Allan Nicholson, deputy timber controller of Canada, the latter refused to do anything about the embargo on logs, offering instead a third of Canada's 1943 output of lumber. The deal was accepted, said Alexander, but later Canadian officials moved to reduce this lumber quota.

Besides the Canadian tie-up, Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton pressed for an explanation of delay in drafting details of a Forest Service proposal for a hundred million dollar revolving fund for reopening of saw mills.

Alexander reported that the plan, after six months of negotiation between WPB lumber officials and the Forest Service, had recently been approved by the WPB over his own opposition and placed on the President's desk. He declared, however, that the plan would mean piling another Government agency above existing facilities, and spending "another hundred million dollars of the taxpayers' money to produce a type of wood not needed in the war effort."

Fulton and another committee member, Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine, asked E. G. Wakeham, director of the pulp and paper branch of the WPB, to furnish information about a list of essential pulp uses which reportedly had omitted newsprint. Wakeham said he did not know of such a list, but added that in his belief "newsprint is certainly essential."

Cramer to Hear Treason Sentence On December 2

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Sentencing of Anthony Cramer, 42-year-old Yorkville mechanic convicted of treason for aiding two of eight Nazi saboteurs landed in the United States by submarine last June, was postponed until December 2 by Federal Judge W. Goddard today.

Cramer, who faces a maximum penalty of death, was convicted of helping Werner Thiel and Edward J. Kerling, saboteurs sent by Germany to destroy units of the Nation's aluminum industry. Both Thiel and Kerling were put to death after trial by a military court in Washington.

Meanwhile, testimony was presented today at the treason trial of Helmut Leiner, 33-year-old gardener, that he expected to receive the golden insignia, one of the highest awards of the Nazi Party in Germany and rarely granted to a civilian.

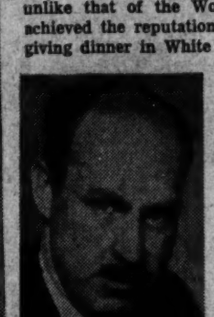
The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Thanksgiving Dinner at the White House

THANKSGIVING in the White House tihs year is not unlike that of the Woodrow Wilsons in 1917 when they achieved the reputation of serving the most frugal Thanksgiving dinner in White House history.



DREW PEARSON

The Wilson dinner consisted of only three courses: (1) Cream of oyster soup with slices of hot buttered toast; (2) turkey with trimmings and vegetables (cranberries were omitted); (3) pumpkin pie but no plum pudding with burning brandy, for doubling of desserts was against Mrs. Wilson's idea of Hooverizing. Black coffee followed as a digestive stimulant.

In contrast, Abraham Lincoln was served the following sumptuous Thanksgiving repast by the Sturges Rifles in 1861, first year of the War Between the States: "Chicken soup, roast beef, turkey, cranberry sauce, chicken, mallard duck, tame duck, boiled ham, boiled corn beef, fried oysters, boiled potatoes, sweet potatoes, boiled turnips, cabbage, celery, mince pie and Hamburg cheese."

There was nothing fancy about the service but there was plenty of it.

Thanksgiving shopping is not particularly difficult for the First Lady, no matter what the Administration. For instead of depending on the market, the White House usually receives several gift turkeys. In recent years they have been coming from a fancier in Rhode Island. Of the six standard varieties of domesticated turkey in the United States—the bronze, Narragansett, buff, slate, white, and black—the bronze and Narragansett are the largest and these are the varieties usually served at the White House.

President Taft, however, always got his turkeys from Tazewell County, Va., from which Queen Victoria also received turkeys and Albermarle pippins every year during her reign.

Senator Ollie James of Kentucky also used to insist that Rhode Island turkeys could not compare with those from the Blue Grass State, and always sent a large bird to Woodrow Wilson.

Incidentally it was not until around 1845 that anyone ever paid much attention to Thanksgiving in Washington. It was considered chiefly a New England holiday. In that year, however, the sleepy city along the Potomac, particularly its merchants, woke up to the joys—and commercial possibilities—of Thanksgiving. Grocers' ads that year blossomed forth heralding "Sixty barrels of white wine, 40 barrels of champagne, two half casks of French brandy, all by recent packet from New York via Alexandria."

Mrs. R.'s Cranberry Sauce

Mrs. Roosevelt's specialty for Thanksgiving dinner is cranberry sauce. Here is her own recipe:

1 lb cranberries.

Pick over and boil in 1 pint of water in open kettle until all are broken. It is well to crush the berries as they boil. Add water if necessary.

Put through sieve.

Set on stove for another 3 minutes to boil.

Then set aside to cool.

One-Man Control

IT HASN'T BEEN featured in the headlines, but more and more one man is running the War Production Board. He is dynamic Wall Street Broker Ferdinand "Eber" Eberstadt, close friend of Gen. Brehon Somervell and generally considered the man placed inside the WPB to run things for the Army.

EBERSTADT

Eberstadt has more power over the life of the Nation than any other one man today except the President. He has maneuvered himself, or been maneuvered by General Somervell, to a place so strategic that practically no civil or military production of any kind can proceed without his approval.

A glance at the revised chart of WPB organization shows Eberstadt, either in person or by deputy, at the head of all controlling points. Most of the titles mean nothing to the layman—such as "Chairman of the Facility Clearance Board" or "Chairman of Program Adjustment"—but they affect the life of every layman.

It is now a fact that without Eberstadt's approval, no road may be constructed in the United States, no hospital may be built, no power plant, church, sewer, school, no airfield, no tank, no airplane, no naval vessel or naval gun.

By controlling the materials that go into all manufacture, he controls all projects, civil and military. Army and Navy met sit with him on the Requirements Committee, of which he is chairman, and have the dominant voice in military matters. But Eberstadt can tell them that their programs are impossible to execute because of inadequate materials.

If a Government agency, Federal or State, wants to build a road leading to a copper mine, to accelerate the mining of copper, the project must be approved by Eberstadt. If another agency wants to build a dam to increase the generation of power for war industry, Eberstadt must approve. If houses are needed for war workers, the project must await approval of the appropriate branch of WPB, and whatever that branch may be, Eberstadt has his hand on the throttle.

Eberstadt's House-Cleaning

HERE ARE SOME of the important men who have been shifted or demoted in recent weeks, largely as a result of Eberstadt's reorganization:

Merrill Meigs has resigned as chief of aircraft division.

A. I. Henderson, former deputy director general for industry operations, has joined the Army.

C. H. Matthiessen, jr., former assistant director general for operations, also has gone into the Army.

James S. Knowlson, former director of industry operations, is now vice chairman of WPB, but with far less power.

William L. Batt, vice chairman of WPB, has been shorn of most of his power, is now handling the Community War Fund for WPB.

Ernest C. Kanzler, former deputy chairman on program progress, is now director general of operations, also with less power.

Lessing Rosenwald's Conservation Division is still functioning, but has undergone a shift of position in reorganization.

Most people inside the WPB are counting the days till Eberstadt or General Somervell himself takes over the WPB altogether.

USO Increases Show Program For Services

New York.—A soldier stationed in one of the larger Army camps this winter will have the opportunity to see 17 different shows, admission free, during the 22-week winter season of the USO-Camp Shows. Even the "forgotten men" in small detachments or stationed in far-away outposts will, for the first time this season, get first-class professional entertainment through 36 newly-organized "Tabloid Troupes" prepared to perform indoors or outdoors, with or without stage facilities.

With a total of 70 different shows running on all circuits this winter, the scope of the program will be three times that of last winter and four times that of last summer. Successful plays to be presented on the USO-Camp Shows circuit include "Room Service," "Claudia," "You Can't Take It With You," "Junior Miss," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "The Male Animal" and "The First Year."

In addition, there will be 22 musicals as "Shuffle Along," "Hit the Deck" and "Helzapoppin," and performances of four concert companies.

Cleric Lauds Pilgrim Lamp For Democracy

The Pilgrim Fathers' contribution to our democratic way of life was lauded last night by Dr. John Bentley as religious services launched the local Thanksgiving observance.

Dr. Bentley, Methodist cleric and professor of psychology at American University, told a congregation at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, near the campus:

"We must continue the Pilgrims' magnificent efforts to maintain our freedom and perfect the adventure of human liberty in a spiritual-social order." He was presented by Dr. Edward G. Latch, pastor.

Community Services Held

Community services in which various denominations participated held the Thanksgiving Eve spotlight, and numerous community and individual services are scheduled for today.

Four downtown churches joined in services at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, one of the Thanksgiving Eve programs designed to accommodate Government employes working today. Joining in the services were members of Calvary Baptist, Mount Vernon Place Methodist, National City Christian and the host church. Dr. William L. Stidger, well-known radio preacher and professor at Boston University's School of Theology, gave a book sermon on Thomas Wolfe's story, "You Can't Go Home Again."

'Faith and Victory' Topic

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will preach at the Washington Cathedral's Thanksgiving services today at 11 a. m. on "Faith and Victory." Other services will include Holy Communion at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m., and Evensong, 4 p. m.

The Ezras Israel Congregation Eighth and I Streets Northeast, today at 11 a. m. will be hosts to a community Jewish Thanksgiving service, in which rabbis and members of a number of orthodox congregations will participate.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader, will conduct Thanksgiving services today at 11 a. m. at the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation, 815 Eighth Street Northwest.

Jews Will Protest New Nazi Atrocity

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, said today a special conference committee of international Jewish organizations had set December 13 as a day of mourning, fasting and prayer in protest against a new Nazi anti-Jewish atrocity program of which he had proof from the State Department.

Asserting that he was authorized by the State Department to disclose details of the program which Dr. Wise said would mean death for five million Jews in Hitler-dominated Europe, the New York Rabbi said he was publicizing the information to "win the support of a Christian world so that its leaders may intervene and protest the horrible treatment of Jews in Hitler Europe."

Huge Nazi Transport Downed by the RAF

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch said today that a mammoth German transport seaplane, capable of carrying up to 80 fully equipped soldiers, was shot into the sea yesterday off the eastern coast of Tunisia by R. A. F. long-range fighters from Malta.

The dispatch called the craft a Blohm and Voss 222. No one was seen to escape as the plane crashed into the water.

Men 'Starved' At Penal Farm, Md. Court Told

By the Associated Press

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 25.—Two convicts on trial for escaping from the State penal farm at Roxbury, six miles south of Hagerstown, today testified in Criminal Court that they were driven to escape by a scarcity of food and other conditions at the penal farm.

One of them, Harry B. Martin, jr., told Judge Joseph D. Mish and a jury that he had been assigned with other prisoners to work on a nearby farm and that when he returned at night he was given "a piece of balogna, a spoonful of tomatoes and a spoonful of potato salad after a hard day's work."

Martin was one of 18 prisoners who were either convicted or who pleaded guilty to charges of escaping from the farm. All were sentenced by Judge Mish, the new sentences to begin on completion of their present terms.

Martin testified he had been placed in a punishment cell, which was without furnishings, for as long as three days at a time.

He said the prisoners who escaped "were driven off because we were half starved."

The prosecuting witnes in all of the jury trials was the penal farm superintendent, Elmer S. Maxwell.

All of the escapes occurred since the May term of court here, or in less than six months' time.

Another of the convicts, Frank Fraley, asked for a jury trial at which he represented himself.

He said he had been confined to the "hole" for as long as five days at a time, and given only bread and water. Beefsteak served at the regular prison tables, he said "was like rubber."

The jury which heard his case convicted Fraley of the escape charge and Judge Mish sentenced him to an additional year in the House of Correction.

Martin was also convicted by a jury and sentenced to serve six months in the House of Correction after completion of his present 18-month sentence for larceny and forgery.

Dixie Congressmen Dine On Delicacies From Own South

Hog jowls, Mississippi catfish and other delicacies of the Southland graced the table at a gathering of gourmets in the National Press Club last night. The guests, headed by Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, were members of Congress from below the Mason-Dixon Line.

George Combs, a native of Kentucky, veteran Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Evening Sun, and R. T. Lawrence of Natchez, Miss., conceived the dinner and left the details to Conrad P. Alberding, manager of the National Press Club.

The menu consisted of a mint julep, black-eyed pea soup, filet of Mississippi catfish friend in cornmeal, hog jowl and turnip greens, big hominy with gravy, and chocolate cake and coffee. To cut down on the use of waiters, the dinner was spread out on two long, V-shaped tables, and the guests helped themselves. James William Bryan and Ben Hall Lambo were serenaded by a quintet of Supreme Court porters. It was their birthday.

Brother Denies Otto Seeks Austrian Throne

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Archduke Felix, who said he was speaking for his brother, Archduke, Otto, denied today charges that Otto, pretender to the Hapsburg throne, was using the military committee for the liberation of Austria as a stepping stone to restoration of the monarchy.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

"There is a tendency on the part of a great many casual players to pay no attention to the cards being played, except when they are winning tricks; by such practice they lose many opportunities to score points," writes Charles H. Goren in his new book, "Better Bridge for Better Players," published by Doubleday-Doran & Co.

"Bridge is a partnership game," the Philadelphia champion continues, "and during the defense of a hand the partnership angle is extremely important. You should try to make every play and every card have a special meaning. Sometimes, even with a completely worthless hand, you may be of great assistance to your partner by giving him information he may need to conduct the defense."

Defense Problems

Today we offer two questions on defense. The answers which Goren recommends are presented below.

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♡ 9 7 4 3 2
◇ A 8 3
♣ Q 8 3

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

You decide to lead a heart, suspecting North is void of the suit. What heart do you lead?

2. Sitting East, you hold these cards:

♠ A K Q 7 4
♡ A 8 3
◇ 9 5 3

	SOUTH

◇ Q J 9 6 2
♣ J 10 9 5

Declarer is playing a four-heart contract and West opens the king of diamonds. What card do you play?

Answers to Quiz

1. South's correct opening is the heart nine. This is a suit-preference signal which eliminates any guess as to which of the two remaining suits, outside of trumps, partner should return if he obtains the lead. The play of the nine, an unnecessarily high card which obviously is not a come-on signal, asks partner to return diamonds, the higher ranking of the two possible suits. The play of the deuce, on the other hand, would request North to return a club.

2. East should play the queen of diamonds, which demands that his partner underlead the ace. This will permit East to win the trick early enough to come through with a club, since the solid spades in dummy will provide discards for declarer if the club tricks are not cashed in a hurry.
